SPEND AND GIVE JOBS! CHICAGO TAKES UP IDEA

Plan to Turn Tide with Idle Dollars.

How the "spend while it counts" plan is making business in Rochester, N. Y., and putting that city back on its feet is told on page 5.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Extension of the Rochester plan of creating emergency employment through individual release of spending power and hoarded money was widely discussed in Chicago yesterday.

While the wheels of industry are gathering momentum and with the $30,000,000 community relief fund in sight, it was felt in many quarters that such a plan for emergency employment would provide just the kind of stimulus for the winter months, and serve to dispel the gloom that should have no place in the Christmas festival of imagination.

D. F. Kelly, a member of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief, spoke enthusiastically for the adoption of the Rochester plan in Chicago, and this morning will take the matter up with the chairmen, Edward L. Ryerson, Samuel J. Insull jr., chairman of the fund raising campaign, and others.

Organization Is at Hand.

"I think the work done by the committee headed by Mr. Ryerson, Mr. Insull, Charles Dewey and others has been the greatest accomplishment of its kind in Chicago," Mr. Kelly said. "They have the organization and their work is nearing completion in the raising of funds. They are well fitted to take up this new task, which may do of even greater importance. I hope they will do so and will refer it to them.

"The main idea of the Rochester plan, as I understand it, is for each person who can do so to help provide work for others who need work so badly. Even if this is done on a small scale by individuals its combined effect will be felt throughout industry. It is said that there is $200,000,000 being hoarded in safety deposit vaults and other places as the result of fear.

"In Rochester, a city of 270,000 or 280,000, they have raised pledges to the amount of $4,000,000 for work expenditure. On that basis we should raise a spending power of $30,000,000 in Chicago. This might turn the tide and then business will take care of itself."

Work Is the Goal.

"Work—not the dole."

This has been the objective of Harry A. Wheeler, chairman of the committee on unemployment plans and suggestions for the President's relief committee.

William A. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has fought for this same end, stressing the importance of the odd jobs that householders could give and the new work that could be created if people who still can do so would adopt this method of aiding in the national emergency.

It has remained for the Rochester group to formulate and put through a success a concrete plan in this direction.

"It is not a money raising plan, but it takes organization and workers. The object of the Rochester drive is to get citizens to sign pledge cards to increase employment by spending a dedicated sum during the next three months in improving home, factory, store, buildings or grounds, by purchasing equipment or making needed additions and repairs. This also includes making purchases for self, family, and friends which otherwise might be deferred. The card is signed, dated and numbered and later a report is asked.

The Plan Is Outlined.

The Rochester plan as it was outlined in Chicago yesterday carries this suggestion for individual ways of helping in this emergency:

1—Improve and repair your home, factory, store, buildings or grounds.

2—Exercise your normal purchasing power and buy the articles you need and want.

As you do one or both of these, jobs are provided and unemployment is relieved. Whether your real estate improvements and your purchases be large or small, you are doing a real contribution toward creating jobs, and your efforts, like thousands of others, will have an immediate effect.

"The idle dollar benefits no one. On the other hand, every dollar which is put into circulation at the present time keeps on working for the benefit of the entire community.

"Concretely this means that the

SOVIETS TO BUILD HUGE STATUE OF LENIN AS BEACON

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 13.—The ancient Colossus of Rhodes is called to mind by the latest enterprise of the citizens of Leningrad. On April 1 they will start work on a gigantic statue of Lenin.

This modern colossus will be 370 feet high and of bronze, like the Statue of Liberty, which stands 305 feet 11 inches above mean tide. It will be placed on one of the dams in the Leningrad port and at its top will be a powerful beacon so that it may serve as a lighthouse.

The Leningrad Communist academy, where the idea for the statue originated, is in charge of the construction, which, it is estimated, will cost 2,500,000 rubles [nominally $1,250,000]. Volunteer workers are collecting subscriptions toward this sum and organizing an army of volunteers to help in the erection of the statue on their free days.

Restore Cafe Man to Wife After Robbery

Three bandits, all armed, were waiting in the home of Charles G. Parker, well known south side restaurant owner, at 1321 Hyde Park boulevard when he and his wife returned late last night.

Two of them held Mrs. Parker captive. The third forced Parker downstairs and into a waiting automobile. The gunman sat at the wheel, held a gun with one hand against his victim, and drove with the other hand to Parker's restaurant at 1310 Hyde Park boulevard.

Rob Him; Take Him Home.

There he compelled Parker to open the safe and hand him the contents, amounting to $1,000. Parker was forced back into the automobile and once again the bandit dexterously drove and covered his victim without giving the latter a chance to resist. The two returned to Parker's home, where Mrs. Parker still sat in the living room under guns of her two captors. She was not molested beyond being compelled to remain still and silent. The bandits departed without a word, taking with them a revolver found in the house.

Home Looted of Furs, Gems.

Jewelry and furs valued at $10,000 were stolen late last night from the second floor apartment of Mrs. Mattie Madeline Drell, 646 Bittersweet place. Mrs. Drell, who is the widow of Benjamin Drell, wholesale tobacco merchant, was unable to specify the articles of loot without an inventory.

The burglars neglected to carry away some $7,000 worth of silverware which they had piled on the floor. They departed just a few minutes before the arrival of Town Hall police. Neighbors had overheard the thieves and notified police, and it was probable that the intruders sensed an alarm had been turned in.

Couple Have Exciting Ride.

Three unfeeling bandits went far out of their way last night to bother James Byrnes, 22 years old, and his wife, Miriam, of 3824 North Roosevelt street. They stopped the Byrnes' car at 65th street and Drexel boulevard, then boarded it and made Byrnes drive to 147th street and Ridgeland avenue. There they took $1.50 from Byrnes and ejected him and his wife from the machine, in which they escaped.

By foot and with the help of friendly motorists Byrnes and his wife reached Blue Island, then Chicago, and finally the Chicago Lawn police station.

Bomb Real Estate Office Second Time in Month

A bomb was exploded early this morning in the real estate office of Theodore Lobstein at 7211 West Roosevelt road, Forest Park. Damage of several hundred dollars was done. The bombing was the second there within a month. Police are investigating to determine the motive.

CHURCHILL HIT BY AUTOMOBILE ON CITY STREET

New York, Dec. 13. — [Special.] — Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the British exchequer, was injured by an automobile while crossing Fifth avenue at 57th street tonight. The driver, Mario Constasino, of Yonkers, helped the statesman into his car and took him to Lenox Hill hospital. Mr. Churchill suffered a sprained right shoulder and cuts on the forehead and nose. Constasino was not held.

Mr. Churchill, who is 57, arrived here less than a week ago with his wife and daughter, Diana, to lecture. He is stopping at the Waldorf Astoria. It had been in a taxicab and ordered the driver to stop between 56th and 57th streets on the Central park side of Fifth avenue. He was injured a moment later when he started across on foot.

Mrs. Churchill was notified of the accident and went at once to the hospital, where she remained for some time. His daughter was not in the hotel at the time, and was not aware of her father's injury until later.

At the hospital it was said the British statesman would remain there over night for observation, and that this would give him an opportunity to recover from possible shock.

SHERIFF FINDS GOLD RELICS OF OLD INCA REGIME

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Dec. 13.—The sheriff of San Gabriel, a village near the Colombian border, has reported to the Ecuadorean Academy of History the discovery of many gold Inca relics in the nearby mountains. The minister of education has prohibited further search until the arrival of Prof. Max Uhle, prominent German archeologist, who will direct the work.

BANKERS' VIEWS ON TAX CRISIS TO BE HEARD TODAY

Legislators to Meet Financial Leaders.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Representatives of five large Chicago banks are to appear in Mayor Cermak's office this morning in response to invitations from two committees of the general assembly. It is expected they will tell the legislators that the answer to the financial problems of the local governments in Cook county lies in making the bonds and tax warrants of those governments attractive, not to the banks as such, but to the investing public.

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR.

The five men invited to participate are:

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, First National bank.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, Continental-Illinois Bank and Trust company.

A. W. HARRIS, Harris Trust and Savings bank.

SOLOMON A. SMITH, Northern Trust company.

JOSEPH E. OTIS, Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

There has been no conference of these men, no meeting of any sort, but it is believed that each of them will take approximately the same attitude as was expressed by Mr. Traylor when he appeared before the joint session of the two houses of the assembly on Dec. 1.

Traylor Expected Home Today.

Mr. Traylor, who has been in Washington, D. C., is expected back in Chicago this morning in time to attend the meeting. It was at his suggestion that the conference was postponed from Saturday until today. But his speech to the assembly, his answers to questions by assemblymen, have been printed in extenso, and it is doubted that either he or any of the other bank heads will be called upon for a speech.

Speaking privately yesterday such of the five as were accessible indicated that they were somewhat puzzled as to the reason why they should be asked to drop their own business affairs to submit to questions from fourteen legislators—seven from the senate and seven from the house—on the situation seems so clear to them.

Talk to Assembly Recalled.

There seems to be no spokesman for the group, but it is expected by those in touch with the situation that the line of reasoning laid down by Mr. Traylor before the legislature will not be lost sight of during the discussion.

The climax of this talk came in a colloquy with Representative Michael L. Igoe, minority leader. The stenographic record of the colloquy, with changes made only for clarity, is as follows:

MR. IGOE: "I understand that if the program (that of Gov Emmerson's tax conference), is passed—does that mean that the banks will be willing to buy these additional bonds?"

MR. TRAYLOR: "You can pass this legislative program in toto, or any other, but until the people of Chicago go to paying taxes you will have no credit."

The Whole Public Involved.

MR. IGOE: "That is the basis of the change in the attitude of the bankers up there, is it not?"

MR. TRAYLOR: "Well, it is not the bankers."

MR. IGOE: "Well, the buying public?"

MR. TRAYLOR: "The whole public. We have sold these obligations to countless thousands of people, sold them to all our trusts. Any trustee today that would buy those obligations under present circumstances would be guilty of bad faith as a trustee. There just isn't any market and there isn't going to be——"

MR. IGOE: "It just can't be done then?"

MR. TRAYLOR: "Until these suits are dismissed and the tax strike dissolved and people go to paying taxes! There is no other way out."

The Income Tax Question.

MR. IGOE: "The reason I asked that question is this. Different people have said here that unless this general assembly passes the income tax law the Chicago banks won't do anything to relieve the taxing bodies up there."

MR. TRAYLOR: "Let me say for the bankers, I have not presented any

WAR AGAINST TRADE SLUMP IS WORLD-WIDE

Moves calculated to offset the business depression and economic woes from over the world are summarized as follows:

JAPAN—The new government has suspended the gold standard and imposed severe penalties for infractions of the embargo prohibiting the export of gold.

WASHINGTON—President Hoover finds continued opposition to his plan of reopening the question of war debts.

WASHINGTON—The estimated budget of the United States for 1932 is four and a half billions of dollars. This is an increase of 267 millions over 1931.

NEW YORK—One hundred million dollars in added taxation, it is estimated, will be required to pull New York state out of its debts.

MONTREAL—Failure of the Canadian sales tax brings out proposal to raise $80,000,000 a year by means of a series of taxes on all articles from raw product to consumer.

ROME—Mussolini system imposes a tax on every citizen without respect to his condition.

CHICAGO — Committees from Illinois legislature will meet this morning in the mayor's office to hear Chicago bankers explain the relation between banking and municipal government and to discuss means of raising funds.

Druggan-Lake Fate Due to Be Settled Today

Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, the first beer barons of Volstead-dom, are to be sentenced to the penitentiary today on their pleas of guilty to income tax evasion charges unless they win another continuance before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The case was continued last Wednesday when Druggan and Lake sought permission to prove that efforts to compromise their civil tax liability were being carried out. Attorney Peter Sissman said he wished to show this in mitigation of punishment. It was indicated by the court, however, that the real reason for granting the continuance was the absence of Defense Attorney William J. Waugh, who was in Peoria defending Teddy Newberry, Capone gangster.

Action Today Indicated.

Druggan and Lake said the treasury department had agreed to compromise their civil liability of more than $500,000 for $150,000. The court asked whether this had been paid and was informed that it had not, but the money was being raised.

Then Judge Wilkerson made it plain that no action taken by the treasury department after the entry of pleas of guilty could affect the criminal cases and indicated he would dispose of them today.

Druggan stated in court that he was [illegible] to understand Judge Wilkerson "would go light" on him for pleading guilty and settling with the government, but he and Attorney Sissman admitted that United States Attorney Johnson had agreed to no recommendation.

Pleas Now Unconditional.

The defendants' pleas were conditioned as to felony counts on the appeals of State Representative Lawrence C. O'Brien and Ralph Capone, both of which were denied by the United States Supreme court. Therefore the Druggan and Lake pleas now stand unconditional.

Judge Wilkerson declared he would impose five years' imprisonment for each felony count or a fine of a cent, as she sees fit from consideration of the evidence. Druggan faces a possible maximum of 32 years' imprisonment and fines totalling $80,000, while Lake is subject to a maximum of 27 years and fines of $50,000.

The prosecutors allegedly had incomes of almost $1,000,000 each during the years from 1923 to 1925 inclusive, the heyday of the Valley brewing business.

Tailor and Wife Kidnaped; Robbed of $2,500 Jewels

As Jack Kurmen, a tailor, and his wife, Rebecca, stepped off a Crawford avenue street car at Ainslie street last night, three men menaced them with guns and forced them into their machine. They drove them to Crawford and Bryn Mawr avenues, where they robbed them of $2,500 in jewelry and $45 in cash. Kurmen lost the money and one ring, while his wife surrendered three diamond bands. The Kurmens live at 4818 North Kimball avenue.

GOES OFF GOLD STANDARD TO BATTLE SLUMP

New Cabinet Acts to Relieve Crisis.

Close Stock Market

TOKIO, Dec. 14.—[Monday.]—(AP)—The Tokio stock market was closed today owing to extremely bullish conditions following suspension of the gold standard. Shares suddenly jumped 60 yen [about $30] during a very brief session today. The exchange probably will remain closed for two days. Other stock exchanges throughout the country also were temporarily closed.

The gold embargo and a subsequent drop of the yen on foreign exchange were anticipated by speculators estimated to have approximated 400,000,000 yen [about $200,000,000].

Banks and other concerns stood to reap enormous profits. The Mitsui bank was reported to have purchased more than 140,000,000 yen worth of dollars, the Sumitomo bank 40,000,000 yen worth, and the Mitsubishi bank 20,000,000 yen worth.

TOKIO, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The new Japanese government in its first official act suspended the gold standard today effective from midnight tonight and reimposed an embargo on the export of gold.

Premier Tsuyoshi Inukai and his Seiyukai party cabinet met within a few hours after their installation by Emperor Hirohito to settle on a financial policy. Finance Minister Korekiyo Takahashi subsequently issued a statement designed to deal with the critical economic situation which has been fazing the country for months.

It was short and to the point, declaring that "any desiring to export gold specie or gold bullion must obtain permission from the finance minister." Violation would bring a penalty of three months imprisonment. It was announced, or a fine of not more than 100 yen [about $50.]

Gold Flows Outward.

Japan removed her embargo on gold exports on Nov. 1, 1930, and since then it is calculated that the outflow has totaled approximately $750,000,000 yen [about $350,000,000] more than half of which left the country since Oct. 1.

The initial effect of the embargo appeared to be to halt two specie shipments to America of 15,000,000 yen each, contemplated by the Yokohama specie bank to complete deliveries of dollar bills.

The finance minister's announcement was followed by a government statement explaining that since "the gold ban was removed the nation's finances and economics have been precipitated into an unusual impasse, revenue impaired, industry sentiment dull, and the outlook for the future was gloomy.

Ban Converting Notes.

The government decided therefore, the statement said, to replace the barrier in order to overcome a situation rendered serious by continued shipment of the metal. To make the embargo complete, it was said, the conversion of notes into gold would also be prohibited.

After disposing of the gold question the cabinet turned its attention to the problems it inherited from the regime of Baron Reijiro Wakatsuki—principally Manchuria. It was apparent that the ministers believed the most important angle was the ousting of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang's army from Chinchow.

In Seiyukai party circles it was said that while the new government has not officially laid down its Manchurian policy, the sooner the world realizes that Japan will not tolerate troublesome war lords along the South Manchurian railway, the better it will be for international relations.

Predict Government Short Lived.

It is considered in political circles outside the Seiyukai party that Premier Inukai's government will be short lived, despite his nationalist policies to heal the nation's wounds. The diet, with a strong Minseito party majority, reassembles in January.

Among Premier Inukai's plans to win popular favor is the appointment of a commission to study China, particularly Manchuria, and to make a number of recommendations to im-leave living conditions. He also is scheming to head budget deficits by bond issues rather than by increasing taxes.

The premier will act as foreign minister until the return from Paris of Ambassador Kenkichi Yoshizawa, who will get the post. Jotaro Tanabote, former president of the South Manchurian railway, has been appointed minister without portfolio, acting as president in Japan.

29 Nations Off Gold Basis.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The departure of Japan from the gold standard and the placing of an embargo on gold exports are the latest developments in the world muddle centering around the yellow metal.

Fifteen nations have now forsaken the gold monetary system temporarily and a number of others are trying to reach a decision. England is not hurrying to stabilize the humble pound and states it would be fatal to do so too soon and at too high a figure.

It is unlikely that Great Britain will attempt stabilization until something is done about war debts and reparations, which Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain considers to be at the base of most international financial troubles.

The devalued pound has given the British another grip on their old markets, particularly in the Far East. Japan had been capturing these in great strides and Great Britain is reported to relinquish her advantage. India had the advantage as a part owner under the gold standard but the outflow of gold to America was seen by leaders of the Seiyukai party to be endangering her currency system.

As long as Great Britain is off the gold basis, currencies are discouraged in other countries linked to the pound by commercial interdependence or political bonds. There has been an all around improvement in commodity prices since Great Britain suspended the standard. India is not a silver country technically, but silver is her chief source of wealth. Great Britain's departure from gold discouraged imports of gold natives to India and stimulated exports.

China Is Worried.

Japanese imports are more costly and Japanese mills are finding it more difficult to compete with Indian mills. Japan is not buying much Indian cotton because the American brand is cheaper. Commercial opinion favors bringing American silver producers in touch with the British with a view to controlling production and sales for the purpose of improving the price.

China, is not pleased that more countries are abandoning the gold basis. Shanghai believes that such action will not help China's depreciated silver or her industry. China's silver stocks are held insufficient to finance the steadily increasing commerce, and if additional nations desert gold it is feared the silver outflow to them will result in stringency.

Scandinavian countries west of the gold standard chiefly because of close commercial connections with England, which made it necessary that their currencies follow the pound sterling, but they take heavy losses.

Holland and Belgium Stick.

Holland and Belgium cling to the gold standard, despite difficulties owing to conditions in Great Britain. Each theoretically is on a fiduciary gold standard, but actually its credit position is similar to that of England.

Neither Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, nor the Balkan countries have officially indicated any possible departure from the gold standard.

Austria and Hungary, whose currencies may be said to be based on "paper gold," have vigorously repudiated suggestions for a departure from gold. On the other hand, dollars have been bootlegged in Vienna for as much as 17 shillings (about $1.50 at the current rate of exchange) to the dollar. There has been similar illegal trading in Hungary.

Rumania now bases its exports on the French franc. Bulgaria has been pinched, but has avoided a currency crisis. Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, both have had the advantage of French support, while Albanian money is regarded as being "as sound as the lira," for it has an Italian foundation.

Germany still is on the gold standard, but the grave of international bankers, without whose continued credit the situation might be different. The government has limited the transfer of marks into foreign currency and the reichsbank maintains a rate of 4.20 marks to the dollar, despite fluctuations in New York.

The Italian lira stands reasonably firm, despite assaults following upon the decline of the pound sterling. During the past two months a score of government regulations have resulted in a diminished movement of the lira in large amounts and restrictions of speculation.

France has indicated it would let nothing damage its gold standard. French officials have been mildly interested in a parity between silver and gold, but not as a French problem.

U. S. Vitally Interested.

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Japan's lapse from a true gold standard, as confidently expected in financial markets late last week, is of vital interest to the American cotton and silk trades. Japan has long been one of the important consumers of American cotton and in turn has sold to America virtually all of its raw silk.

Bankers pointed out that so far as banking and securities are concerned the effect should be slight. American banks have negligible balances in Japanese currency. Japanese bonds held in this country amount to $305,800,000, and are payable in gold dollars whether Japan is on a gold standard or not.

It is pointed out in the cotton trade that a drop in the Japanese yen makes it more difficult for Japan to buy dollars to pay for American cotton and in that way might tend to restrict Japanese purchases of cotton. At the same time, however, the Japanese cotton spinner notes a decline in his raw cost, particularly in wages so that he is better able to sell his fabrics abroad.

The slump in the yen is expected to have a temporarily depressing effect on raw silk and may cause inventory losses to silk mills. On the other hand, the reduced cost may help silk to compete with other fabrics.

Saturday's price of the yen, which was as low as 41 cents, a drop for the day of more than 7 cents, carried that currency to a level not seen in six years.

During 1930, Japan lost nearly $150,000,000 in gold to the United States and more than $140,000,000 so far this year, making a total of roughly $290,000,000 since the removal of the gold embargo. Her total remaining store of gold is understood to be in excess of $300,000,000.

FIGHTING RESUMED IN MANCHURIA

MY TROOPS ARE NOT MENACING JAPANESE, MARSHAL CHANG SAYS

PEIPING, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Full responsibility will rest on Japan if hostilities occur in the Chinchow area of Manchuria, Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang said in a statement today.

"Japanese press correspondents in Shanghai report Japanese military authorities have said that despite the withdrawal of Japanese troops east of the Liao river, my troops have menaced the Japanese rear and, disguised as bandits, have molested the Japanese troops," the deposed governor of Manchuria said.

"They threaten that unless Chinese troops in Chinchow withdraw south of the great wall the most serious situation will be created in the near future. If certain Japanese military leaders did make such a statement their object is to mislead the world so that the last vestige of the Chinese central government's authority will be driven out of Manchuria, as has been frequently threatened in the immediate past.

"The league council knows perfectly well that the old allegation that I am concentrating troops at Chinchow is untrue, and neutral foreign officials and observers also know there has been no movement of Chinese troops calculated to aggravate the situation, nor have the Chinese utilized bandits."

CHINA'S BOYCOTT SHRINKS JAPAN'S EXPORTS A THIRD

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Dec. 13.—The extent to which the Chinese boycott and the Manchurian disturbances have affected Japan's commerce is indicated by the trade returns for November, which show that exports to China have shrunk to less than one-third of the value shown last year.

Exports to all China in November amounted to only 10,425,000 yen [about $5,212,500], compared with 32,486,000 yen [$16,243,000] in November, 1930, while the balance of trade was 5,640,000 yen against Japan, as compared to 16,490,000 in her favor in 1930.

TOKIO, Dec. 14 (Monday).—(AP)—A dispatch to the newspaper Asahi from Tientsin today said Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang plans to order the withdrawal within the great wall of the Chinese forces at Chinchow in anticipation of a more positive Manchurian policy from the new Inukai cabinet.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Dec. 13.—Two Japanese soldiers were killed and one was seriously wounded this afternoon by so-called irregular troops and reported to belong to the self defense corps of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, ousted Manchurian governor, about two miles north of Chuluho, which is about 20 miles from Mukden, an official Japanese report stated.

According to the report, a squad of Japanese troops consisting of one officer and four men were reconnoitering along the Liao river when they were fired upon by Chinese troops. The Japanese returned the fire. Later they were again attacked by another larger group of Chinese concealed in the village of Lanchipu, located north of Hsinmin, about 25 miles from Mukden.

Chinese Flee Toward Mukden.

The Japanese immediately rushed reinforcements consisting of a company of infantry and one machine gun detachment from the Japanese garrisons at Hsinmin and Chaluhe. They occupied the village and the Chinese fled towards Mukden. The Chinese casualties are unknown.

A Chinese newspaper, Shengching Shihpao, published under Japanese auspices, in reviewing the Manchurian independence movement, stated that 45 counties out of 58 in Fengtien province have declared themselves independent and have affiliated with the Japanese controlled independent "peace and order committee of Mukden." The paper further stated that the creation of a new state out of Manchuria and Mongolia is not far off. The new state would include the Mongolian provinces, Inner Mongolia, Hulunaer, Jehol, Chahar and Suiyuan, the purpose being to create a self-governing Mongolia.

The mayor of Mukden yesterday petitioned Gen. Shigeru Honjo, commander of the Japanese army in Manchuria, to clear the bandits from the area west of Mukden and adjacent to the Chinese-British controlled Peiping-Mukden railway. The mayor said he has received the request from peasants and villagers in the district, asking that the Japanese army undertake to exterminate them. The mayor said that Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang is responsible for the bandit activities, which, he claimed, are making it impossible for crops to be marketed because of the pillaging.

Answers Baker's Criticism.

Tsuuke Tsurumi, who is well known in America as a lecturer and writer on Japanese-American relations, in an address delivered at Baird returned to a statement by Newton D. Baker, former American secretary of war, criticising Japanese military activities in Manchuria.

He declared that "it is highly wise and necessary that Japan concentrate immediate attention on eliminating sources of misunderstanding now existing abroad regarding the true nature of Japanese military activities in Manchuria, because the day is not far distant when the United States, Great Britain and Germany will recover from financial shocks and economic complications and Russia will complete her five year plan."

Tsurumi, who is a son-in-law of the late Count Goto, and is important politically in Japan, recently returned to Japan after a year's lecture tour in America. He is now investigating the situation in Manchuria.

Tsurumi, in his address, reviewed Japanese-American relations since the Russo-Japanese war. He declared that Japan's 21 demands on China in 1915 prejudiced American against Japan and that the relations were further aggravated by Californian anti-alien land legislation. Since the Washington conference, however, he said, relations have improved and that America's fears of Japanese aggression in China were disarmed.

Present military activities, he indicated, are again causing disruption and suspicion.

"We Japanese must carefully note American opinion," he said, "since we China, being in a weaker position, has an advantage in explaining her stand. The Japanese position in Manchuria is so hopelessly intricate that it makes it difficult to hammer the truth home to the minds of an independent jury of world opinion."

Army Objects to Plan.

Tsurumi's address created considerable attention here because of efforts of a large number of Japanese liberal statesmen, including Consul General Hayashi, who have been trying to form a committee representing Japanese major interests in Manchuria, with the military in a subordinate position, for the purpose of unifying the Japanese policy in Manchuria.

Hayashi is expected to return from Tokio this afternoon to make the plan effective. However, the military is not sympathetic with the scheme, a statement today declared, as the Japanese army has its own plan.

HOOVER STRIVES TO DISENTANGLE DEBT MEASURES

He Seeks to Avoid Delay on Moratorium.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—With steadily increasing evidence that the President's request for a reopening of the war debt settlements is doomed to defeat in congress fresh complications in the situation developed today to plague Mr. Hoover.

SENATOR C. C. DILL.

Having entangled the question of "readjusting" the war debt settlements with his plea for immediate sanction of the Hoover one year moratorium, the President is now striving to disentangle the two propositions to avert further delay in action on the moratorium.

It transpired today that either Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.] or Senator Clarence C. Dill [Dem., Wash.] or both will offer a rider to the moratorium resolution recording the opposition of congress to the rescission, much less the cancellation of the 11 billion dollars of war debts Europe owes the United States.

Believe Rider Would Carry.

Adoption of this rider by both houses would seal the doom of the president's proposal that the war debts commission be reconstituted for the purpose of reopening the settlements and easing the terms, temporarily at least, for Great Britain and other debtors. The prevailing opinion among senate and house leaders is that such a rider could not be defeated by the administration forces.

In any event consideration of the moratorium resolution will be prolonged by the move to attach the rider. At best the house leaders do not expect the adoption of the moratorium resolution in the house before the latter part of this week. The ways and means committee is to hold hearings on the measure Tuesday and may report to the house Wednesday. With congress scheduled to recess for the holidays on Dec. 23 the senate will be unable to dispose of the measure until January.

Linking Termed Blunder.

A good many Republican leaders, upon reading the President's moratorium message last Thursday, said at once Mr. Hoover had blundered seriously in linking the reopening of the debt settlements with the moratorium question. In an effort to disentangle the two propositions, Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills issued a statement today asserting "that there never at any time has been any intention of coupling the President's proposal to recreate the world war foreign debt commission with the proposal for a one year suspension of payments on foreign debts. The bill introduced by Senator Smoot and Representative Collier covering the latter proposal was prepared in the legislative drafting bureau of the house at the suggestion of the treasury, given by the treasury to Senator Smoot and Representative Collier, and contains no reference to the recreation of a debt funding commission."

Formula Made Public.

Mr. Mills also made public the document which he was unable to induce house and senate leaders to indorse yesterday. It was the formula proposed to notify debtor governments that they would not be considered to have defaulted in the payments of 125 millions due Tuesday merely because congress has not adopted the moratorium resolution. The formula follows:

"The President's proposal for a debt suspension of one year has been submitted to the congress. Owing to the fact that the congress only met last Monday and that the appropriate committees of the senate and of the house of representatives are not in a position to consider the proposed legislation prior to the 15th of December it will be impossible for the debt suspension legislation to be enacted by that date, while recognizing that neither the President of the United States nor any of the executive departments of the government has power to alter the terms of the debt agreements now in force, I desire to advise you that under the special circumstances in which the proposal was made and accepted and without intending in any way to vary the legal rights of this country, it appears to this government that a postponement on the part of your government of Dec. 15 payments pending action by the congress would not be subject to any just criticism."

Says No One Objected.

Mr. Mills asserts that he asked none of the congress leaders to subscribe the formula but that he asked whether there were any objections to it and none was voiced.

It turns out that the opposition to linking the debt settlement has been increased by the argument advanced by the administration that with Britain off the gold standard it will be burdensome for the British taxpayer to continue the present debt payments. Why is that a reason, asks the opposition, for loading the burden onto the American taxpayer? "With the pound sterling at par," the Secretary of Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, "the British treasury has to pay £160,000,000 pounds in order to get $788,500,000. With the pound selling at the rate at which it sold on Dec. 10, 1931, it would take 44,000,000 pounds, or an increase of 84,000,000 pounds, or 47 per cent. Or, in other words, the burden on the British taxpayer is increased by almost one-half.

"When the British debt settlement was made it was estimated that its present value at a 4½ per cent interest rate was 80 per cent of the total amount due prior to funding. If the amount to be raised in pounds sterling to meet the obligations to us in dollars is increased by 47 per cent it becomes apparent from the standpoint of the British taxpayer he is asked to meet not the obligation as established by our debt commission but an amount considerably in excess of such obligation.

"Nothing could more forcibly illustrate the changed situation which places on the executive as well as the legislative branches of government the duty of reexamining the obligations of our debtors and their ability to meet them during a period of world wide economic depression."

UNCLE SAM TO TAKE INVOICE TOMORROW OF HIS POCKETBOOK

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The nation's banking structure will have a taste of 1932 volume of business Tuesday when it will be called on to handle the biggest turnover of the year, amounting to around two billion dollars.

This huge task will result from government financing operations, including the new treasury offering as well as the receipt of fourth quarter income tax installments. Also, a large dollar total of dividends will be paid on corporate stocks.

In addition, completing its work of allotting one billion 300 millions of the new treasury notes and treasury certificates, which have been oversubscribed, the government will face the assignment of retiring nearly a billion of maturing paper. It is estimated that around 708 millions of maturing notes and certificates will be tendered to the government in payment of subscriptions to the newly issued treasury securities. A balance of roughly 600 millions will be paid from cash.

Income tax installments, according to estimates, will total 250 to 300 millions, which is substantially below the corresponding figure of last year.

Another sizable item figuring in the midmonth transactions will be the payment of $95,000,000 interest on government debt.

No accurate estimates are available of the amount of money that will be paid out in dividends, but the fourth quarter payments by the Standard Oil group alone will approximate $66,000,000.

HAMBURG POLICE FIRE ON REDS AT CHRISTMAS FAIR

One Slain, 4 Wounded in Political Riot.

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 13.—(AP)—One person was killed and four were wounded when police fired into a communist demonstration at the famous "Dom" Christmas fair today. Panic started among thousands of persons at the fair after the fighting. It took almost two hours for police reinforcements to gain control.

The communists, disregarding the holiday political "truce" proclaimed by Chancellor Bruening in his recent emergency decree, attempted to harangue to the crowds at the fair.

Hundreds of sympathizers attacked the police with stones and iron bars as they attempted to arrest the speakers. Meanwhile the crowd formed a procession, shouting "down with Bruening" and singing the International. Out-numbered, the police drew their pistols and fired.

50 Hitlerites Arrested.

AURICH, Germany, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Fifty followers of Adolf Hitler, German fascist leader, were arrested in a police raid on a meeting here today. They were wearing their "Nazi" brown shirt uniforms, which are banned in public.

Agrees on Reparations Report.

BASEL, Switzerland, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A basis for a final report was decided upon today by the "big three" of the Young plan advisory committee which is studying Germany's capacity to pay reparations.

Walter W. Stewart of the United States, Sir Walter Layton of Great Britain and Prof. Charles Rist of France agreed upon the plan after private conversations yesterday and frequent consultation with other members of the committee today. Alberto Beneduce, Italian representative, is expected to present the plan to the full committee Tuesday for adoption or rejection.

A spokesman for the committee, who revealed the existence of the plan for a report, said the chapter headings had been drawn up and the scope discussed, but that this did not necessarily mean everyone was in agreement on what the chapters would contain. It was learned elsewhere that Prof. Rist, Sir Walter Layton and Dr. Carl Melchior, Germany's representative, probably would be chosen to draft a document containing recommendations to the countries concerned.

A technical subcommittee wrestled again today with the problem of Germany's assets abroad. This appeared to be the hardest knot the experts had found. It was reported the subcommittee, headed by Maurice Frere of Belgium, was almost ready to intimate it was impossible to obtain a reasonable figure regarding these German holdings.

Mortician Makes Mistake in His Report on Body

Harry Kube, a member of the firm of Purcell and Murphy, morticians at 1346 West Madison street, called the Desplaines street police station last night and announced the body of a man was lying on the sidewalk in front of his place. When Policeman Roger O'Brien reached the scene he found that the man on the sidewalk was alive, but apparently intoxicated.

Center Dedicated

Open house and a grocery shower yesterday featured the dedication of the Sacred Heart Social center at 824 West 19th street, the first institution to be founded by the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women, under the direction of the Rt. Rev. Bernard J. Sheil. Miss Leona Grenier will be the social director of the center, which will be under the supervision of the Rev. James Walsh, pastor of Sacred Heart church across the street.

The center was formerly the convent of the Helpers of the Poor Souls, and has been remodeled to provide five large rooms on the main floor which can be thrown into one large assembly hall, with a capacity of 200 persons. Classes in English, first aid and other subjects will be held there, and activities in prospect included a choral society and numerous forms of sports.

TORNADO, FLOOD LASH 2 STATES; 3 DEAD, 20 HURT

Arkansas and Louisiana Towns Are Hit.

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Torrential rains and severe windstorms swept over southwest Arkansas and northern Louisiana early today, causing great damage in Camden and Waldo, Ark., the death of three children and injury to about 20 persons.

In the vicinity of Eldorado, Ark., and Monroe, La., the rain caused rivers and creeks to rise, submerging railroad trucks and delaying train service because of washouts. The water was reported receding near Eldorado tonight, however. A washout on the Illinois Central cut off traffic between Monroe and Shreveport. The rain was general over Arkansas.

Dead Are Children.

One fatality occurred at Camden, where 5 year old Helen Colvert was buried in the wreckage of her home, destroyed by a tornado. Two Negro children were killed on a plantation near Minden, La., when a tornado destroyed three houses.

Some of the largest structures in Camden, a town of 7,000 population, were wrecked by the wind. The wrecked buildings included the Methodist church and the court house.

Although most of the buildings in Waldo, a town of 1,000 population, were wrecked, only two persons were known to be injured there. The storm struck Waldo first.

Guard Called Out.

A company of National Guardsmen was called out to patrol the devastated area. Work of removing the debris was begun immediately. Hundreds were left homeless and were being cared for in makeshift quarters.

The heavy rainfall caused a dam to break near Marshall, Tex., destroying thousands of game fish in an artificial lake.

AUTO AND CAB CRASH AT CORNER —ONE IS KILLED

Charles Gibbons, 25 years old, 3040 Windsor avenue, was fatally injured yesterday when his automobile crashed into a taxicab at Garfield avenue and Halsted street. He headed a collection agency.

Two friends, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin L. Holland, 5423 Montrose avenue, who were with him, were injured, as was Harry Holles, 3018 North Kedzie avenue, the taxi driver.

This death increased the Cook county motor toll to 1,221 since Jan. 1.

1,200 TEACHERS MAY BE DROPPED IN ECONOMY PLAN

Estimate Saving at More than $3,000,000.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The school board is expected to consider a plan to drop 1,200 school teachers from the pay roll next year. This is to be a part of the board's effort to reduce the operating costs of the school system $8,156,784 in order to keep the 1932 expense within the estimated revenue.

School Auditor H. H. Brackett was instructed to prepare estimates of the savings which would result from the dismissal of 1,200 teachers and he has submitted detailed figures. The method of reducing the number of teachers is to increase the number of pupils for each instructor. Mr. Brackett has compiled figures showing the saving by adding from one to six extra pupils to each teacher.

Estimate on Saving.

On the basis of adding approximately four pupils to each teacher, Mr. Brackett figures 1,200 number of teachers eliminated and the annual saving as follows:

Schools—	Teachers.	Money.
Elementary	804.5	$1,469,200
Junior high	261.9	691,667
Technical high	100.3	270,424
Senior high	113.6	321,511
Totals	1,280.3	$2,904,813

That plan involves an increase in the average number of pupils to the elementary school teacher from 42.26, as at present, to 46. In senior high schools the increase would be from 30.7 pupils per teacher to 35, in the technical high schools from 27.4 to 33, and in the junior high schools from 34.3 to 40.

If, however, the number of pupils in the elementary schools per teacher are increased by an average of 45, as has been suggested, the saving is calculated by Mr. Brackett at $21 teachers and $3,191,304.

May Shut Two Colleges.

Linked with this idea is a feeling among some of the trustees that the Chicago Normal college and the Crane Junior college can be shut down for one year without doing much harm. It has been pointed out that there are 1,150 normal school graduates now waiting for a place in the public schools as teachers. The present list of unassigned teachers, from which substitute teachers are selected, is said to total about 2,200.

If the number of pupils per teacher is increased, the number of unassigned teachers will be augmented accordingly.

Crane Junior college employs 141 teachers and the Normal college 83, making 200 more to be added to the 1,280 which would be dropped if four extra pupils were added to each teacher left in the service. If both of these colleges are closed for a year, the recommended appropriations will be reduced $195,570 more.

These plans will be on the desks of the trustees when they assemble to consider the budget today; but they probably will not be taken up until later.

It is the agreed program of the board to start through the budget to trim out first the "unnecessary and the less essential items." If those do not total the necessary saving, then the foregoing and other plans will be considered.

The trustees are said to resent the lobbying of representatives of teachers' unions to close the schools a month early as a means of cutting expenses. President Myers has a plan to make the required savings without early closing of the schools.

Joseph Spain of the school engineers' union openly opposes shutting down the schools, even if it is necessary for the employés to work a month without pay.

To all of the heads of the business departments, at a meeting in his office yesterday, Business Manager Withall suggested that they work a month without compensation if necessary. Each department chief was instructed to ascertain the attitude of his employés toward such a plan.

See Fight Over Normal.

The educational staff is expected to oppose the closing of the Normal school. Several meetings of protest were held last week and long arguments were made against the closing of the Normal. Another statement was issued yesterday which said:

"For years Chicago has maintained a standard of education unsurpassed in the country. This has been made possible by the training of teachers at the Chicago Normal college. The training they receive at the Normal is the best teacher training available in the country."

EXPECT FURTHER ACTION IN ORAL WILL CONTEST

Further proceedings are expected in the Probate court this week on the oral will by Edward Hars of Palatine, bequeathing his $15,000 estate to his fiancée, Miss Cecile Zeiser of 1635 Greenleaf avenue. Hars was injured in a motor accident on Sept. 6, and before dying said he wanted Miss Zeiser to have everything he owned.

Last Saturday Oscar Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner, overruled objections of Hars' parents, Edward and Martha Hars, and said that the oral will leaving the estate to Miss Zeiser, was valid.

Newspaper records of September, 1924, carry accounts of two sisters, Cecilia and June Zeiser, at that time residing at 731 Briar place, individually offering to marry any man who would pay off a $3,500 mortgage on the 80 acre farm of their mother in Wisconsin. They received numerous proposals, it was said.

A reporter called last night at the Greenleaf avenue address to ask Miss Cecile Zeiser if she were the Cecilia Zeiser of the 1924 marriage offer. A woman who stated she was Cecile's sister said that her sister would not care to discuss the matter.

DIES AFTER SHOPPING TRIP.

Mrs. Lettie Fackler, 58 years old, 1022 Berwyn avenue, a widow, died of heart disease Saturday night shortly after she had returned from a shopping tour. She formerly lived in Quincy where her husband was a flour miller.

ASSEMBLY GROUP TO GET BANKERS' TAX VIEWS TODAY

Five Financial Chiefs to Meet Legislators.

defense of them. I am perfectly willing to, at any time, with anybody, both as to the way they have financed the municipalities of Cook county and as to the way they have paid taxes on their personal property and their real estate. I will defend that at any time. But that is merely incidental.

"Let me say this for the banks. I have never talked to any of them about the character of talk I was going to make this morning, or the things I was going to say.

"I don't know whether they agree with me or not. I don't think they do—probably as to the income tax, maybe not as to the board of assessors and board of review. I am speaking by personal opinion only. But the banks have no candidates for any office.

Trying to See Way Out.

"They have no desire to influence legislation. They are offering no ultimatums. We are just facing the most embarrassing situation we have ever faced in our history. We are trying to see our way out.

"In 1929, before the city council finance committee, I pictured just this picture as clearly as I could. We had our rescue party then, the citizens' rescue party. You passed generously and promptly the legislation suggested, all of which, if the people had paid taxes, would have cured our situation. But we are where we are today because they won't pay and for no other reason on earth.

"Their reasons for not paying are their own. But the fact is we would have no difficulty financing the requirements of municipal governments in Cook county if the people would pay taxes. But if and until they do there is no chance."

Women to Ask Action.

An urgent appeal for action by the special session of the general assembly is expected to be voiced this noon in the city council chamber where representatives of 50 women's organizations are to meet with Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of the League of Women Voters in the chair.

According to the advance notices, speakers are to present "the tragic financial situation faced by Chicago and Cook county."

Members of the executive committee in charge of the arrangements include Mrs. Laura Lunde, Woman's City club; Mrs. Walter Benson, League of Women Voters; Mrs. Willa Laird, Chicago Woman's club; Miss Esther Dunshee, Woman's University club; Mrs. Edward Loewenthal, Conference of Jewish Women; Mrs. Henry Hardy, Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Holland Flagler of the Parent-Teachers' association.

PASS RELIEF OR CITY SALARIES WILL STOP, CONTROLLER ASSERTS

City Controller Szymczak, speaking at a fraternity meeting at the Morrison hotel yesterday, predicted that unless the special session of the legislature acts this week on the relief program Chicago policemen and firemen will join the ranks of the unpaid school teachers.

"But more important from the standpoint of credit," he continued, "is the possibility of default in the payment of $8,000,000 in principal and $3,000,000 in interest on Chicago's bonded indebtedness, due on Jan. 1. The legislature should realize the seriousness of this situation and waive all political and factional differences in order to pass this fundamental legislation in the course of the next week."

POLICEMAN SHOT FIGHTING BANDIT DIES OF WOUND

Policeman Michael Oakley of the Summerdale station died yesterday in St. Mary's hospital of a bullet wound he suffered early Saturday when a bandit attempted to hold him up near Bloomingdale road and Damen avenue. The policeman was returning to his home at 1908 Cortland street when he was halted by the gunman.

Instead of submitting to the robbery he resisted and the bandit fired. As Policeman Oakley slumped to the ground with a bullet in his abdomen he drew his own weapon and fired six times at the fleeing robber. Before he died he said he believed he wounded the gunman and a search was started for him. Policeman Oakley was 35 years old and unmarried. He had been a member of the police force for ten years.

$868,629 TAXES PAID IN DRIVE ON RECEIVERS

A total of $868,629 has been received by County Collector McDonough in taxes for the years 1927, 1928, and 1929 since the beginning a month ago of the campaign by the Circuit and Superior court judges to force receivers appointed for income bearing properties to pay their tax bills.

The figure was disclosed yesterday with the promise that the aggregate collections will mount to more than $1,000,000 in another week. Bills are to be sent today to receivers for 188 additional pieces of property who have reported that they have on hand the funds to pay $397,591 in delinquent taxes.

The total collections at present were made from 127 receivers who control 604 parcels of property. The largest number of these are under the jurisdiction of the Circuit court, only a few collections thus far having been made in the Superior courts. Today, however, Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan is to order reports on the financial condition of several hundred other properties with a view toward more tax payments.

BORRELLI ORDERS POLICE TO SEIZE BANDIT'S SPONSOR

A police guard was posted around a store at 5621 South Kedzie avenue yesterday under orders from Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli to arrest the proprietor, Frank Guido, upon his return there. Guido, the judge asserted, misled the court when he wrote a letter Friday vouching for the good character of Peter Longo, 22 years old, member of the C gang, and promising the prisoner employment if Judge Borrelli would grant him probation. A few hours after Judge Borrelli granted the prisoner probation the police caught Longo with a roll of bills stolen in the holdup of a restaurant at 1358 West 22d street. Longo was identified by the restaurant owner, Frank Ballant, and locked up.

Realty Men to Discuss Assembly Bills Tonight

Real estate holders and brokers will meet in the Morrison hotel at 8 o'clock tonight, where legislators and members of the Chicago Real Estate board, which is sponsoring the meeting, will discuss the various tax plans now before the special session of the general assembly.

DOLLARS WORK, THEN JOBLESS IN ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A City Quits Waiting for Business; Makes It.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—When Rochester quit waiting for business and started making business, common sense in at least one city's economic life was applied. A lot of merchants sat down to their Sunday dinner today in a happier frame of mind than they have been in months and many of the industrial leaders of this city took their holiday automobile rides without "that guilty feeling," when they passed a workman's cottage.

Saturday night found Rochester in an optimistic mood and shopping for the Christmas holidays reached a new peak judged by the crowds in the department stores and shops.

The city has suffered from adverse trade conditions. The clothing manufacturing business was hard hit, for the Rochester tailors mostly make the higher priced clothing. The kodak business, the city's leading industry, has not been as hard hit as some of the other manufacturing concerns, but it, too, has felt the lack of buyers.

Gives Business a Shove.

The present concerted assault on hoarded dollars, while it may reach a $5,000,000 total in pledges for constructive spending, will not alone make successful businesses well. It will, however, as present indications show, give business the shove over the top of the hill that it has been needing and through providing jobs for the unemployed give the entire community a stimulating jolt that should give trade an all around quickening.

As an indication of the zeal with which Rochester's rich and poor alike are entering into the spirit of the "spend while it counts" campaign two examples were given to me today by Libanus M. Todd, general chairman of the emergency unemployment campaign and the man who put all those "protectograph" machines in the banks a number of years ago.

"George Eastman, our wealthiest citizen," said Mr. Todd," was sold on the idea from the beginning. He looked about his home for needed improvements. He couldn't find anything there that needed fixing, so he decided to build a private sewage disposal plant for his home.

Has Old Sofa Recovered.

"Then there was a woman who had very little money, but a big desire to help. She looked about her small home for a spot she could afford to spend a few dollars in fixing up. Finally she decided to have an old sofa recovered. Those two cases are typical of the responses we have had."

To illustrate the whirligig of a dollar in action, Mr. Todd told me of the now famous car load of brick he bought to build a garden wall. The brick maker made a profit, he said, as did the brick agent. Then the truckman got a job. Two men got jobs loading and unloading. Masons were put to work—"all because I bought a car load of bricks I would not have bought until some later date."

Henry H. Stebbins Jr., one of the organization's chairmen pointed out that "if every individual who is in a position to exercise even his normal purchasing power would do so, instead of feeling that it is essential to cut expenditures to the minimum, there would be immediate relief from present stagnation in building and trade."

Tells How Campaign Operates.

Harry P. Wareheim, whose business is organizing civic campaigns, today gave THE TRIBUNE correspondent an outline of how the Rochester emergency employment campaign got under way.

"We were fortunate here in having a trained campaign group available for the task," he said. "I turned the community chest staff loose on the clerical work soon after the first meeting at Mr. Todd's home in which more than one hundred civic and business leaders agreed to help Rochester get back to work."

"Rochester was divided into divisions and division chairmen named from the volunteer workers. Each division chairman selected his captains and the captains their teams.

"Several meetings were held before any actual canvassing was undertaken. The workers were coached in their jobs and warned to make a distinction between routine promised expenditures and expenditures that would not have been made except for the campaign. We would have had a staggering amount to report if the canvassers had not drawn the line between ordinary every day spending and emergency spending."

Only Extra Spending Counts.

"Many of those solicited asked if they could include their Christmas gifts in the pledge. The answer was 'no' unless the giver agreed to spend his dollars for a gift where it was originally planned to spend five dollars.

"Each pledge signer, no matter what the amount, was told to make his expenditures where and as he wished. We have refrained from publishing names of pledge signers in order to keep them from being annoyed by solicitation for their business or repair jobs."

The luncheon gatherings were held to be essential to the success of the campaign by Mr. Wareheim, who warned the organization committee at the beginning of the drive that once begun, its momentum must not be allowed to slacken.

Some Few Pessimistic.

There were a few pessimists among Rochester's citizens who expressed doubt to this writer that all of the pledges would be fulfilled. They were afraid that "high pressure" salesmanship at the city's doors was being carried out with too much campaign zeal.

Time alone can tell about all of the pledges, but the dollar diggers on the working committees with whom I have talked, and their number is more than a score, were confident that Rochester would come through with every cent of spending money it had promised.

This town is going to show the rest of the country the way out, was the consensus of their remarks. And that is the spirit in Rochester right now.

STABBED BY HOLDUP MEN.

JANE ADDAMS SHOWS SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT FOLLOWING OPERATION

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—Jane Addams, 71, of Chicago, famous American feminist and social worker, was reported slightly improved tonight, following an abdominal operation performed yesterday in the Marburg clinic at Johns Hopkins hospital.

Dr. Thomas S. Cullen, head of the gynecological clinic of Johns Hopkins, who performed the operation, issued a bulletin to the effect that Miss Addams was improving.

Many telegrams from women leaders throughout the United States were received by Miss Addams. Friends from Chicago and Massachusetts who came here to be with Miss Addams were permitted to visit her for a few minutes.

individual who is accustomed to buying one suit of clothes should not try to make the old one do; that the individual who usually purchases two suits should not now provide himself with merely one; that if new furnishings or equipment for the home are contemplated they should be purchased immediately rather than deferred; that if you want a new radio, buy it now; that if a new automobile is being considered, go to a dealer at once; that so-called luxuries should not be considered as nonessentials; that the Christmas list should be extended rather than curtailed. The purchases of these things and hundreds not enumerated mean employment. This means jobs and wages."

And jobs and wages mean more spending, for necessities at least. Thus the vicious circle is broken.

EXTORTION PLOT FAILS; POLICEMAN CHASES SUSPECT

A renewed attempt to blackmail John Rychtarczyk, store owner at 3611 Diversey avenue, was frustrated last night with the extortionist supposedly being shot by a policeman. He escaped, however.

A week ago the two front windows of Rychtarczyk's store were smashed. Then he revealed to police that he had received and ingnored letters and telephone calls demanding several hundred dollars on threat of death, or kidnaping of his children. Policeman Thomas Etchingham, of the Shakespeare avenue station, was detailed on guard.

Last night two boys, between 12 and 15 years of age, carried a note to Rychtarczyk. It read; "This will introduce to you the boys who have come for the money. They do not know anything about the deal, and if they are detained more than three minutes your store will be bombed." The boys were given a dummy package and went out. Etchingham followed. When they stopped to talk to a man the policeman ran up. The man fled as the policeman fired several shots. The boys fled also. Etchingham thinks he hit the man.

'SQUINT' LEADS TO CAPTURE OF FOUR AS KILLERS

Youths Confess Slaying During Holdup.

Four youths, members of an organized gang of twelve robbers, confessed yesterday to the Albany Park police that they murdered Adolph Caravetta, a storekeeper at 736 North Damen avenue, on Nov. 30. They shot him nine times because, they said, they "didn't like his attitude," and because he resisted. After the slaying they went to a dance, but left behind a blood stained revolver as a clew.

Seven of the bandit gang, including the killers, are in custody and the others are sought. The arrest of the seven, already identified in more than sixty holdups, followed an unusual and seemingly trivial clew—the "squint" eyes of one of the youths.

List Names of Slayers.

The confessed slayers are Frederick Loscombe, 20 years old, 2251 North Tripp avenue; Steve Surman, 19, of 1023 North Wood street; Stanley Szymelfjmik, 21, of 1248 North Wood street; and Thaddeus Warden, 20, of 1810 Augusta street. According to the confessions Loscombe and Surman fired the fatal shots while Szymelfjmik looked on. Warden was the chauffeur.

Solution of the Caravetta murder came dramatically at the Albany Park station yesterday while Surman was being questioned by Capt. Joseph Goldberg and Assistant State's Attorney George S. Lavin. Lavin had in his coat pocket the revolver dropped by the killers at Caravetta's feet. This weapon had been stolen some time before from a robbery victim, John Andrewchuh, 1656 Keeler avenue. Lavin questioned Surman about the Andrewchuh holdup. The prisoner said the gun in question had been thrown into the river.

Gun Brings Confession.

"Here's the gun," interrupted Lavin suddenly, holding it out. "And it's got blood on it. It's the blood of Caravetta, the man you killed in his fruit store in Damen avenue."

Surman confessed. Within half an hour Warden, Loscombe and Szymelfjmik confessed. Asked why they killed Caravetta, the robbers said they did not like his attitude. Surman first fired a shot to frighten him, and when Caravetta reached for the gun Surman and Loscombe both fired. The robbery netted $90.

The other three bandit gang members in custody are Harvey Sturman, 25, of 1637 North Kedvale avenue, an alleged leader; Lawrence Sisson, 23, and Joseph Genaro, 18, of 1038 North Avers avenue. They were seized several nights ago in Sturman's flat.

"Squint" Eyes Are Clew.

Capt. Goldberg revealed last night the "squint" clew which led to the capture. Some time before a meat market employe had been robbed. He told his father one of the men was "squint eyed." Several days ago the father saw Szymelfjmik, who is "squint eyed." The father followed him to Sturman's flat and notified Capt. Goldberg. Detectives, though having little faith in the slim clew, watched the flat. What they noticed prompted the raid.

Five of the men immediately confessed numerous robberies. Sturman told Capt. Goldberg he was not sorry over what he had done. "I wasn't foolish with the money I got," he told the captain. "I bought food and supplies for my wife and two children. I know now that they'll be provided for during the winter."

'BLACK SHIRTS' SALUTE GANDHI; HE PRAISES THEM

ROME, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi spent his last day in Europe before returning to India by inspecting Premier Mussolini's Black Shirt legions.

He found them to be "fine looking, well organized and drilled young men," and seemed to enjoy receiving the Fascist salute. He was escorted by his host, Gen. Mario Moris, to visit a number of Fascist organizations.

After seeing the Coliseum and other ancient landmarks, he passed the evening talking with friends until time to take the train for Brindisi, from where he will sail aboard the Pilsna tomorrow for Bombay.

Murder Suspect Sought in Kidnaping of Policeman

Joseph Steck, 2913 North Cicero avenue, said to be wanted for two murders in Cleveland, was being sought yesterday as one of the two men who kidnaped Detective Harry Miller on Thursday evening when the latter, with Detective Harry Lang, attempted to question them. Morris Cohen, 21 years old, 1142 South Francisco avenue, Steck's companion, was arrested near his home early yesterday morning by the policemen. Both policemen recognized Cohen as one of the two men. Cohen said Steck forced him to take part in the kidnaping.

FALL DOWN STAIRS FATAL.

Newton Ladd, 69 years old, 1120 West Van Buren street, fell down a flight of stairs in his home early yesterday, fractured his skull, and died within a few minutes.

U. S. WILL SPEND 4½ BILLIONS IN '32 FISCAL YEAR

Estimate for Next Year Is $4,112,909,950.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—Actual United States government expenditures during the current fiscal year will amount to virtually four and one-half billion dollars, according to figures given out at the White House today. This represents an increase of 267 million dollars over actual spendings during the 1931 fiscal year. These figures include expenditures for general, special, and trust funds.

The White House figures disclosed that estimated expenditures during the 1933 fiscal year, counting general, special, and trust funds, will amount to $4,112,909,950. The exact figures for 1931 were $4,319,950,000, and for 1932 they were $4,482,153,400. These statistics were prepared by the bureau of the budget.

Expenditures Segregated.

The tables given out at the White House were prepared on a functional basis so that expenditures for national defense, foreign relations, building construction, and other purposes were segregated. The figures showed that while national defense costs have increased but little since 1929, big increases have been registered in the charges growing out of former wars, legislative costs, law enforcement, service agencies, aids to agriculture, air mail and the merchant marine, and in the cost of buildings charged to national defense but constructed at shore stations and military posts.

One of the largest increases was registered under the subtitle "Judicial Law Enforcement and Regulatory Commissions." The costs are given as 505 million for 1933, as compared with $76,000,000 back in 1929. Costs under this heading during 1930 were $85,000,000; in 1931, $91,000,000, and for the current year 103 millions. Prohibition enforcement costs are responsible almost wholly for these increases.

Service Budgets Listed.

Army costs were listed as $12 million in 1929 and 329 millions [estimated] for 1932. Expenditures for the navy were listed as 364 millions in 1930 and an estimated 374 millions in 1933. These figures did not take into account, however, the funds annually made under the Hoover administration economy program upon national defense expenditures after appropriations have actually been voted. Examination of the figures showed that foreign relations costs jumped from $13,000,000 in 1929 to $15,000,000 [estimated] 1933.

Comparisons Are Made.

The comparison of 1929 and 1933 government costs in detail follows:

	Group 1. Fiscal year 1929.	Estimated fiscal year 1933.
Public debt:
Principal	$ 549,008,703	$ 496,805,400
Interest	678,390,886	640,000,000
Total	1,227,834,103	1,136,803,400
Army:
Military expenditures	312,037,843	319,969,200
Navy:
Naval expenditures	366,193,474	374,536,800
Total national defense	678,141,317	694,505,900
Veterans of former wars	770,942,564	983,160,000

MEXICAN PAPER ATTACKS RITES FOR PATRON SAINT

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The war department's dismissal of its headquarters band from the army because the band gave an unauthorized concert at the Basilica of Guadalupe yesterday was announced in the newspapers today without comment.

El Nacional, organ of the National Revolutionary [government] party, devoted part of its front page today, however, to editorials and interviews attacking the clergy and the church over the celebration at the basilica. The ceremonies marked the 400th anniversary of the supposed appearance of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's patron saint, to a humble Indian.

It is customary for military bands in Mexico to accept private engagements, but only with authorization from the department of war. The announcement of the dismissal of the headquarters band indicated that it had failed to obtain the necessary permission for the concert.

Hungarian Plot Suspect Hangs Self in Prison Cell

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Gen. Schill, a former officer of the Hungarian gendarmerie, hanged himself in a prison cell today while awaiting trial in connection with the recent unsuccessful plot to establish a dictatorship in Hungary. The plotters had offered the post of minister of war to Gen. Schill, the government alleged.

PORTUGUESE RIOT AGAINST RULE OF DICTATOR; 1 SLAIN

Troops and Police Fight Mob; Bombs Hurled.

EVORA, Portugal, Dec. 13.—(AP)—One person was killed tonight in a hostile demonstration against the government of President Carmona in Evora, capital of the province of Alemtejo.

The riot started over dedication of a club called "May Twenty-eight." [Dr. Manuel de Arriaga, first constitutional president of Portugal, resigned on May 28, 1915, after a revolution].

Hurl Bombs and Fire Shots.

Rioters hurled bombs and fired shots as a delegation from Lisbon was returning to the railroad station after a banquet arranged in honor of the Carmona government. Ten persons were injured and more than 60 arrested.

As cabinet representatives, officers, students and other supporters of the Carmona régime arrived on a special train for the dedication, the crowd received them with cries of "down with the dictatorship," and "death to tyrants."

Fight for Two Hours.

Police, however, held the crowd in check until after a meeting in the National theater, where disturbers were ejected.

After the banquet the rioters and police fought for two hours. Troops were called out and martial law was proclaimed. Soldiers and guards restored order and patrolled the streets afterward, while military commanders called on all civilians to surrender their arms.

MARINES QUELL HONOLULU RIOTS OVER RAPE CASE

HONOLULU, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Marines were called out today to quell a series of riots in Honolulu. Rioting in the city's streets followed the kidnaping and beating of Horace Ida, one of five men tried recently on charges of assaulting the young wife of a naval officer.

Mistrial of that case resulted in an official statement that naval officers' wives were unsafe in Honolulu, an increased naval shore patrol to protect women, and reports that the women were carrying arms.

Indignation of Honolulu citizens was climaxed by the kidnaping and subsequent rioting. The marine detachment brought into Honolulu under command of Capt. James D. Wilson, was returned to the Pearl Harbor naval base after the disturbances were quieted and order was restored.

LEGUIA ORDERED IMPEACHED AS A TRAITOR TO PERU

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The impeachment of former President Augusto Leguia and his associates as "traitors" was authorized in a resolution unanimously adopted by the Peruvian congress today.

The resolution requested the assembly to take such action because the ousted president "delivered the national railways to foreign interests, made wrongful loans, and carried on other outrageous deeds during his administration."

Leguia, who was ousted from power by a revolt in the summer of 1930, is convalescing from an operation in the Naval hospital at Callao and is under heavy guard.

EXPECT TO TRACE CANAL GRAFT TO OFFICIAL TODAY

Startling Evidence Will Be Offered, Report.

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup, in charge of the sanitary district graft conspiracy prosecution, said yesterday that he expected to present startling evidence of pay roll padding this week. The prosecution, in at least one instance, he said, will trace pay roll money into the pocket of one of the defendants, a former trustee.

Evidence of forgery of pay roll checks is also in the possession of the prosecution and he expects to produce testimony to that effect, it was said.

Half Million in Pay Graft.

"We expect to prove at least $500,000 in pay roll padding alone before we quit that line of testimony," said Mr. Northup. "The sum may even reach considerably more. The total shown, which is now approximately $200,000 will mount rapidly as we start to introduce the evidence on the Illinois Valley claims division."

Each of the investigators in this division had a fat expense account in addition to a substantial salary, it is reported. The duties of these investigators were to investigate flood claims. The investigators were assigned to different territories throughout the state.

Expect 1,000 Pay-Rollers.

The handling of the pay roll testimony will be speeded up this week because the judges have decided to start court one hour earlier. Instead of starting at 11 o'clock, as last week, the first witness will be called at 10 o'clock. The state expects to call at least 1,000 pay-rollers. Last week 262 witnesses testified.

The state's strongest evidence, however, is not expected until the pay roll padding has been disposed of. The charge of graft in connection with the $1,000,000 cinder bridle path will be taken up following the pay roll testimony. The defense is expected to oppose introduction of this testimony because the specific count of the indictment pertaining to the cinder path was quashed. Prosecutor Northup will contend that most of his testimony is admissible under the general count.

Judge Fisher Hears Case.

The trial is before Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher. Judges John Prystalski and James J. Kelly are sitting with him in an advisory capacity. The defendants are Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the board during the whoopee era of 1927-1928; James M. Whalen and John J. Touhy, present trustees; Frank J. Link, August Miller and John K. Lawler, former trustees; John T. Miller, former head of the department of permanent plants and structures, and Martin Edelstein, former real estate agent. Timothy J. Connelly, former purchasing agent, is a fugitive.

YOUTH ADMITS ROBBERY.

Joseph McKay, 20 years old, 2435 Cowper avenue, Evanston, arrested early yesterday with a revolver, admitted that he had robbed Mrs. Katherine Cornman, 2018 Thayer street, Evanston, of $1 a week ago. His brother, James, 15 years old, and Frank Worley, 16 years old, were arrested with him.

30 LOSE LIVES AS ITALIAN TUG SINKS IN STORM

Cruiser Saves 100 Men in Rough Seas.

MADDALENA, Sardinia, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Thirty sailors and marines were believed to have drowned when the Italian tug Teseo sank in a storm off the coast of Sardinia today.

More than 100 persons were rescued by the cruiser Trieste after hours of struggling efforts to launch boats and shoot life lines to the foundering vessel.

The Teseo ran into a terrific gale yesterday, after leaving here for Civita Vecchia, 300 miles across the Tyrrhenian sea, on the Italian mainland. It lost its rudder and its masts were swept away. After 12 hours it was only 12 miles from this coast.

Answer Boat's S O S.

The tug sent out several S O S calls and the Italian ministry of marine sent boats to the tug's rescue from Spezia, Civita, Vecchia, and Sardinian ports.

The Trieste alone was able to ride the turbulent seas to the tug's position to pick up the sailors who were struggling in the water. The German ship Trapani was the first to sight the helpless vessel, but was unable to aid her. It was not until 5:30 o'clock this morning when the Trieste came into view.

The Trieste rode back and forth, close to the foundering boat, for four hours, shooting lines that fell short and trying to launch boats in the violent seas.

The Teseo finally sank at 9:30 a. m., after nearly 100 men had been rescued by the Trieste, which picked up a few more before the cruiser put back to port, leaving the cruiser Ancona on the spot, searching for other survivors or bodies of the drowned.

The Trieste took those who were rescued to Golfo Aranci in Sardinia. The S O S calls from the Teseo had informed the Trieste that the tug was leaking badly with the waters so high in the boiler room that the fires were extinguished. For hours the vessel tossed helplessly in the high waves without power and with the crew unable to steer it.

Boat Swept Ashore; 12 Drown.

BONE, Algeria, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Twelve men perished when a coast guard cutter was swept ashore in a heavy gale here early today. The boat broke away as it was being towed into port during the storm, which had swept the coast for three days, damaging ships and harbor works.

SHOW MOTORIZED FIRE FORCE HAS JUMP ON FLAMES

Results Compared with Police Motorization.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The motorization of the Chicago fire department has substantially increased the city's ability to curb conflagrations.

It has greatly increased the speed by which the firemen can reach a blaze. In many instances they arrive before the fire has gained much headway.

The discarded horse drawn engine averaged four minutes for the first mile, five for the second and about six for the third mile, according to the old records of actual "runs." The motor driven engine averages less than two minutes a mile for as many as are required to get to the fire, and in some districts better time is made.

Tests Show Improvement.

Official tests show a wider variance in speed. The 1911 records were the oldest which were available yesterday. They show that with the firemen in their bunks and horses in their stalls it then required two minutes and six seconds to run the engine out of quarters for 150 feet, stretch 300 feet of hose and put 100 pounds of water pressure at the nozzle of the hose.

For the test this year the time was 41 seconds, although the distance traveled now is a required 300 feet instead of 150 feet.

In fires within the stock yards it has been demonstrated several times that the motor driven apparatus quartered at Des Plaines and Monroe streets has gotten to the fire in less time than the records show it required for the horse drawn apparatus at Archer avenue and Loomis street. The motorized apparatus in this case travels four and a quarter miles as compared with less than two and three-quarter miles for the horse drawn engine.

The Fire Marshal's Test.

But that does not accurately represent the increased efficiency of the motor over the horse, in the opinion of the Chicago fire marshals. A better test of the speed of the department, from their viewpoint, is whether their apparatus arrives so tardily at a fire that the flames get away from the first alarm companies.

So they measure roughly the effective speed of the department by the fires from which a second, third, or fourth alarm must be sent to get the flames under control.

By that yardstick the first 10 months of 1907, 1930 and 1931 have been measured. In 1907 there were 179 fires out of a total of 6,257 for which extra alarms were sent for more apparatus. That is an average of one fire out of every 34.

In 1930 the fires totaled 21,267 and the extra alarm fires 217. In 1931 the fires for the 10 months totaled 17,298 and there were only 111 extra alarm fires. In 1930 one out of every 97 fires was an extra alarm fire and this year one out of 155—in contrast with one out of 34 fires in 1907.

Increase in Fires Explained.

"If the fire department has increased its speed so much why are there so many fires now in comparison with 1907?" the fire department leaders were asked.

The prompt reply of every one on the staff was that there are more fire hazards now than in 1907, despite the increase in fireproof construction.

They produced a copy of the 1930 annual report which shows 1,000 fires due to defective wires, 657 due to crossed wires in autos, 87 to defective motors, two to radios, 818 to auto backfire, six to moonshine still explosions, 39 to explosions of gasoline, 31 to sparks from motors, 32 to overheated motors, 15 to overheated brake bands, 37 to hot oil, 165 to overheated electric irons, and so on.

They asserted that these causes for fires in 1907 were so small as to be not worth considering. The chiefs contend that with the speedy motors they extinguish fires much faster than in the old days of the horse.

Motorization of the Police.

The police department, in contrast, has motorized and radioized, but it still appears unable to cope properly with crime. First the department motorized its patrol wagons. After an offender is caught, he is taken to the station in a patrol wagon. Later the police got automobiles in which to go out and find the offenders.

Thirty-three patrol wagons cost $148,500. Then six more were purchased at $19,320 and these were followed by half a dozen more at a cost of $20,910—a total of $189,130 for motorized patrol wagons.

Yesterday 132 squad cars were reported in service. Their cost was given as $155,050. The squads in these cars are credited with capturing a considerable number of criminals, but the police are unable to show the improvement in their work which the firemen claim for their motorization.

To increase the effectiveness of squads, radio receiving sets have been installed in about 100 cars. The average cost of installation was about $180. In comparison, the Lincoln park board has four police squad cars equipped with radio sets. The first installation cost about $125 and the three others approximately $85 each.

For three broadcasting stations, the police have spent $81,000, excluding the control apparatus, on which a cost estimate was not available yesterday.

BAY TREE HOUSE ON MACKAY ESTATE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Roslyn, L. I., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—A fire of undetermined origin early today destroyed the bay tree house at Harbor hill, the estate of Clarence H. Mackay, chairman of the board of the Postal Telegraph company, in which Mr. Mackay's collection of several hundred trees, valued at about $50,000, had been stored. About 150 of the trees also were destroyed and the loss was estimated at $25,000.

A greenhouse adjoining which contained collections of orchids, roses, fruit trees and rare plants was threatened by the flames, which were seen for miles as they swept the frame structure of the bay tree house.

The Mackay mansion, separated from the fire by several hundred feet of lawn, was not endangered.

Husband Shot When He Hunts for Wife in Flat

Edward Gordon Lewis, 41 years old, 4108 Sheridan road, was shot four times and probably fatally wounded early yesterday by Albert Gervasi, 40 years old, 1243 West 24th street, in the latter's flat. Lewis, who was taken to the County hospital, told the Marquette police he went to the flat to find his estranged wife, Marianna. Gervasi fired at him, Lewis said, when he pounded on the door for admittance. Gervasi and his wife are being sought.

TED NEWBERRY NEXT TO FACE U. S. TAX QUIZ

Ted Newberry, public enemy No. 6, will be the next of the Capone gangsters to be prosecuted for income tax shirking, it was learned yesterday. Internal revenue department agents for several months have been investigating bank deposits made by Newberry during 1927, 1928 and 1929, and they are reported to have uncovered sums totalling more than half a million dollars. Newberry, it is said, filed no income tax return for any of the years mentioned.

Newberry, one time power in the "Bugs" Moran gang, went over to the Capone gang after the St. Valentine's day massacre in 1929 and since then has been in charge of beer running on the north side, it is said. After Al Capone was jailed for income tax evasion, Newberry was mentioned, along with Llewellyn Humphries and Frank Rio, as Capone's probable successor.

In 1925 Newberry was charged with the murder of Homer Finch, a road house keeper in Chicago Ridge, but the case was not pressed when the state was unable to find two important witnesses. Last Friday he was exonerated by a federal jury in Peoria of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. Fourteen of his co-defendants were found guilty.

IT DOESN'T COST MUCH TO BE A GOOD FELLOW

Guidance Is Offered for Preparing a Basket.

How much does it cost to be a Good Fellow?

Every year brings inquiries from Good Fellows who must count their pennies before they assume the rôle of Santa Claus carrying a basket of Christmas cheer into cramped, dingy tenements.

The cost of a Christmas basket is based on this excerpt from the original Good Fellow's letter that appeared in THE TRIBUNE for the first time 21 years ago: "You pay not one cent more than you want to pay—every cent just where you want it to go."

Which means, Good Fellows, that you need not buy expensive foods and high priced toys and clothing. That is not the idea of the Good Fellow basket. The idea is to take food necessities and a few toys and warm clothing to brighten the lives of poor children on Christmas—their day of days.

A Suggested Food List.

To all who enroll as Good Fellows a bulletin of suggestions is given quoting the approximate prices at which certain items may be purchased. Following is a food list for an American family of six, prepared on the advice of an expert dietitian

Beef rib roast or fowl, 5 or 6 lbs.	$3@$1.80
Sweet potatoes, 4 lbs.	.25
Butter or oleomargarine, 1 lb.	.30@.42
Green peas [dried], 1 lb.	.08
Canned tomatoes, 1 can	.12
Sugar, 2 lbs.	.13
Raisins, 1 lb.	.10
Nuts [mixed], 1½ lbs.	.32
Oranges, 6 to 12	.35@.37
Apples, 4 lbs.	.20
Celery, 2 bunches	.05
Bread, 1 loaf	.05
Coffee, 1 lb.	.35
Maximum total	$4.44

It should be understood that prices vary with markets, so the above total, including the cost of the fowl rather than the beef, may be more or less nearer Christmas. However, it may be seen that baskets can be had for a small amount. If the family is unusually large the amounts purchased of course should be increased.

Cheaper Basket Possible.

If a cheaper basket is desired, bread and coffee may be omitted as families usually have those articles. If more money is to be spent, flour and white potatoes may be added.

Don't forget, Good Fellows, that each child should have a toy, even if it costs only ten cents. And those who wish may pack the corners of the Christmas basket with warm clothing for the youngsters.

To enroll as a Good Fellow, call Superior 0100 and ask for the Good Fellow department. Those in the loop may stop at THE TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street.

GROUP OF HOTEL MEN OFF TO BACK CONVENTION BID

Chicago's idea of hospitality for the Republican national convention next year will be told by a delegation of the city's hotel men which left for Washington yesterday to appear before the G. O. P. national committee tomorrow. With them went Sidney Strotz, representing the Stadium, who has information to show that the city has an ideal convention hall waiting for the delegates.

The party included Walter Gregory, Palmer house; Frank Bering, Hotel Sherman; John Burke, the Congress; E. J. Stevens, Hotel La Salle; Harley Darlington, the Stevens, and Leonard Hicks, the Morrison.

DR. BUTLER SAYS SELFISH NATIONS CAUSE OF WARS

New York, Dec. 13.—[Special.]—The ideal of a nation conducting itself as a moral person instead of a group of selfish persons seeking solely their own supposed good, was drawn by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university, winner with Jane Addams of the Nobel peace prize for 1931, in an address on "The International Mind" this afternoon at the Columbia University club.

In the adoption of this ideal, President Butler saw the only adequate assurance against future war. Another war on the scale of the 1914-'18 conflict, he said, would be immeasurably more ruinous and could only result "in the destruction of what we call civilization."

Dr. Butler traced the growth of nationalism, accompanied by the pressure of man for civil and political liberty, in the centuries between the breakdown of the Roman empire and the world war, and said that during the war nationalism on the old competitive, inimical framework committed suicide and the search for liberty was put in chains.

"In that war every combatant lost and no combatant won," said Dr. Butler.

"The coming era of internationalism will not make less use of nationalism, of patriotism. On the contrary, it will elevate them to a higher level. It will make us look on our nation as a moral person having duties and obligations as well as rights, and inspire us to call on other nations to do the same thing."

MAYOR TO JOIN COUNCIL GROUP TO PLAN BUDGET

Predict Hot Debates on Department Cuts.

Mayor Cermak will sit in with the finance committee of the city council this week in the preparation of the appropriations for city departments for 1932. Because of severe reductions as compared with the current year the budget discussions are expected to develop a number of heated arguments.

J. L. JACOBS.

J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert, has recommended a budget of approximately $58,000,000. This is a decrease of more than $9,000,000, or 14 per cent, under the appropriations of $67,552,962 for 1931. It is within the estimate of the 1932 revenues as compiled by City Controller Szymczak, who also has compiled a tentative budget for 1932 which is within a few hundred thousands of the figure set by Jacobs.

Consider Three Ordinances.

Besides the ordinary budget the committee has seven ordinances for consolidations and abolitions of departments to decide upon. These ordinances are as follows:

1. Establishment of a department of service and regulatory inspection which will combine many of the small inspection groups.
2. Establishment of a central purchasing department.
3. Abolishment of the departments of city physician, public welfare, compensation, license, and business agent.

Other Savings Held Possible.

In a report to the council the mayor's advisory commission stated that it believed it would be possible to save $12,000,000 annually, besides the savings in the budget, through "careful planning, standardized specifications, free and wide competition and close supervision over contract expenditures" on public improvements financed out of bond issues and special assessments.

All of these savings, the commission said, can be accomplished by action of the city council alone, and it predicted that further economies, the amount of which has not been estimated, may be made when needed legislation is obtained from the general assembly.

"The recommendations as presented by the commission [which include Jacobs' budget estimates] have my approval and support," said Mayor Cermak.

SABIN WILL LEAD PARTY'S FIGHT TO RAISE CASH

New York, Dec. 13.—[Special.]—The Democratic "victory campaign" being organized by the Democratic national committee will be headed in New York state by Charles H. Sabin, it was announced here today by John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee in 1924 and active in the "victory" drive for 1932. Mr. Sabin has long been a supporter of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

In making the announcement of the appointment, Mr. Davis said he was sure that every Democrat and friend of the party in the state would support Mr. Sabin and his committee's work "enthusiastically." He declared that there has never been a greater national need or greater opportunity for a Democratic victory.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

SMASHING COSTS OF GOVERNMENT.

Government costs have smashed the political structure the country over. Mr. Mellon's deficits confront the central government, but the little red schoolhouse has an unpaid school teacher. Village boards as well as city councils have empty tills. The Chicago sanitary district spending in the whoopee period of pay rolls may seem unreal, but government units, big and little, were everywhere traveling so fast they hit only the high spots. When Mr. Coolidge talked of economy it was regarded a bit of dry little New England parsimony in the era of Midas, but Mr. Coolidge seems to have had as foresight what now descends upon most of his fellow countrymen as hindsight.

In a few years of delirium Americans thought that the tide of money would always run in, and they permitted their governments to make the sky the limit for public undertakings. The ebb has covered the beach with the débris of ambitious public undertakings. It is not only that waste and thievery have scattered the public revenue but that government units have everywhere overreached themselves in extending their functions, widening their activities and increasing their territory of operation. Taxes will not meet the costs and withdrawal and retreat have become imperative.

Governments have had their spree in enterprises regarded as good as well as in practices known to be bad. The theoretical desirability of an undertaking is no longer its justification with a public body using public money. Public works have been overdone by the federal government, by the states and by the municipalities. All these have overloaded themselves with debts and have overloaded their sources of revenue with costs. All will be required to get back within the primary necessities of government if they are to survive. They must permit sources of revenue to recover.

The federal government will find itself required by vanishing income taxes to reduce itself to half its size and its operations to half what they are now. Such undertakings as Boulder dam, Muscle Shoals, road building, farm subsidies, sumptuary regulation, extravagant and extraneous department activities, etc., cannot be supported with public money. Bureaucracy has extended itself beyond the power to pay. If the check does not come from the decision of government itself to conform to circumstances, then necessity will produce it rudely and destructively. There is a chance for government to make the decision, and there is a chance for an orderly retreat. If use is not made of the opportunity there will be a smash.

It is necessary to define the proper functions of government and get within the limitations agreed upon. This is true of municipal, state and federal governments alike. All have duties which a generation ago were simplified and which in these times have come to be regarded as limitless. The desirability of a result, if it could be urged in any interested quarter, has been held to be justification for an attempt to obtain it from a public body using public funds. That theory is unsound. It does not follow that because an object might be demonstrably good in itself it is therefore a public obligation. There is first to be considered the legitimacy of the undertaking by political government, and then the ability of the public body to stand the costs. It is, for instance, sound government policy to obtain revenue from excise taxes on alcoholic beverages. It is unsound federal government policy to attempt to regulate the personal habits of citizens. It may be sound government policy for California to provide itself a water supply at great cost, but it is unsound policy for the federal government to put the money of federal taxpayers in such a project.

American governments have not tested their undertakings by questioning either the propriety of the proposal as a political adventure or the ability of the sources of revenue to stand the cost. Procedure has been upon the theory that any project for which a plausible argument could be made was therefore a proper political undertaking, and that the sources of wealth from which it was to be paid were inexhaustible. The combined errors plus the inherent waste of political action have produced present day governmental conditions.

DUMPTY DUMPTY AND THE BRIDGE EXPERTS.

The current battle of the bridge whist giants is not to have unexpected consequences. Designed to prove the superiority of one type of bidding or another, the first sessions have served chiefly to uncover the human weaknesses of the well advertised experts who are taking part in the competition.

The gentle falling out which led to the open and much publicized contest now seems to threaten all of the experts with the unhappy fate of Humpty Dumpty.

All the king's horses and all the king's men failed to restore that splendid character to the eminence he enjoyed before his historic fall, and it is doubtful now whether all of the explanations and alibis, most of which are reminiscent of a million lesser bridge tables, ever will restore the experts to the prestige they enjoyed before the contest.

Mr. Lenz, publicly hailed as the experts' expert and the dean of all bridge players, is just another player who forgets what's trumps. Mrs. Culbertson, crowned by her husband as the greatest woman player in the world, loses an easy set by failing to return an obvious lead and gets just as provoked when the cards run against her as any player of less fame, and all four repeatedly bid from one to four more or fewer tricks than they can make.

The plain or parlor type of bridge player, remembering how often he has read under their signatures of the marvels of deduction and the miracles of play invariable to the experts, has begun to wonder how did they get that way and what made them experts?

The excellent game of contract bridge has been made unnecessarily confusing and complicated by instructors who have surrounded it with mystery and mathematics. The systems, always at the time of discovery pronounced absolute and final, have been changed repeatedly, and with each change a new set of $3 books is sold.

Now it comes out that the systems are not infallible, and that Lenz is just as apt to bid two tricks too few as Culbertson is apt to bid two tricks too many.

An army of novices is beginning to suspect the experts have feet of clay, and if Humpty Dumpty ever gets back on the wall he will find his work cut out for him. Maybe he will have to get a book on bridge.

FROM THE WELL OF AMERICAN HUMOR.

Sing Sing football brightened a drab year considerably. When the undergraduates there play baseball the sport can be regarded as recreation and exercise and reasonable enough, but football seems to come up out of the deep well of American humor, because, no doubt, football is associated with the most gorgeous enthusiasm of youth and the prison is a place of human dejection. Alabama Pitts, tossing or catching forward passes against the Poughkeepsie judge's team or against the Port Jervis policemen, decorates the penitentiary with college colors and in the naive confusion of reality and illusion there is the incongruity which Americans weave into some of their humor.

Sing Sing as an institution of higher education with a presumably loyal alumni is not to be allowed, however, to furnish the only or all the exhibits which make for a brighter world even in gray times. Leland Stanford university adding a course in fishing, bait and fly casting, etc., does its part; so did the University of Southern California, when a football player was sequestered in a mountain cabin for a week under the surveillance of a private detective, the boy having been suspected unjustly of giving information to football opponents. That the parents of the boy consented to this extraordinary treatment of their offspring does not detract from the noteworthiness of the event.

A good deal of American humor arises out of enthusiasms and is contributed for the most part unconsciously. It probably will not be possible for some time yet for the Sing Sing alumni to procure the dismissal of a warden if the team loses three games in succession, but in institutions where the post-graduate influence is freer and more powerful a coach will hunt his livelihood in other quarters if the season has been too harrowing for the old boys' emotions. It may indeed come to a ceremonial sacrifice of the coach at the close of a bad season. He may be tied to a goal post and made a burnt offering—"to encourage the others."

In observing the scene of American humor we must not pass by the exhibit at Chicago's door. The county highway police has posted a detail on the main road passing through the village of Dixmoor, formerly the village of Specialville, with Charles Special as mayor. The policemen stop and warn motorists that the Dixmoor police are enforcing the law and that the driver will find himself in a trap and fined if he makes the slightest error of judgment or if his car lacks any of its legally required equipment.

Speed traps are usually revenue producers, and this village, as Specialville, was notorious, but nevertheless here you have one set of law enforcers kindly assisting the motorists to escape from the hands of another set and the moral again is almost too neat for explication.

The Other Side

A DOWNSTATE VIEW.

[Olney Daily Mail.]

With the need to reduce the burden on real estate taxation, Cook county wants to impose a sales tax on the people of the state.

Downstate members are united in insisting upon an income tax which will reach the intangible wealth of Cook county. It is declared that Cook county would pay 87½ per cent of the income tax and the downstate 12½ per cent. Under the proposed income tax bill the income tax money would go into the state's distributable school fund. On the distribution of this school fund Cook county would secure a return of 42 per cent and downstate 58 per cent. Chicago, which prospers because of the centering of wealth sucked from downstate, justly can be required to support the expenses of government in Illinois.

The sales tax, which Cook county members are insisting upon, even as sales tax laws go, has remarkable features. For instance, a farmer's wife sells a dozen eggs and she pays a sales tax. The buyer sells the eggs to a Chicago commission house and pays a sales tax. The commission house sells the eggs to a retailer who pays a sales tax, and of course the consumer pays all of the accumulated sales taxes. The same rule will apply to every commodity sold in the state.

This is a typical effect of the bill proposed. The consumer will pay more, will buy less and give a new cause for stagnation of business.

The sales tax falls equally upon the poorest citizen. It is another device to shield wealth from paying its share of taxes.

This reflects the situation existing at Springfield and it is time for firmness on the part of members of the assembly from downstate.

MAYBE IT'S PRUNED.

Small Mary, watching men in her grandfather's orchard banding trees, was told how this kept leaf worms down. Weeks later, in the city, she saw a man with a mourning band around one arm.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. R. L.

AREN'T MEXICANS the sensitive things! President Rubio has just advised the youth of his nation to spurn the offer of free scholarships in Oklahoma university, offered in honor of the two young Mexican students killed while traveling in their car through that state on their way for vacation. The officers thought they were bootleggers. Pshaw, Mexico, and also tut, tut! Why get sore about a little thing like that. Some of us Americans are getting killed every day or so by hair trigger dry enforcers, but we don't get mad and pout around about it. If we weren't the ones that got killed (of course, in that case we wouldn't have a word to say; you can see that, Mexico, yourself), why we just say, "Oh, well, better luck next time; settem up in other alley! Hip, hooray, and away we go!" Ah, Mexico! cheer up! It's a great life if you don't weaken.

LULLABYE.

Down in the west, the sunset flush
Like the flush on my little one's cheek;
And birdie-mammas their babies hush,
And slyly the little stars peek.
In poppy-palaces fairies sing,
And drowsy elves their gossamers fling,
And out of the brooks the kelpies spring.
Hush-a-bye, baby—hush!

The light dew lies on the downy wing;
The gnomes are so 'fraid of the dark—
See how their firefly lanterns swing
And light up each tiny spark.
But the river is sobbing—it cannot sleep
'Til it reaches the ocean so broad and deep,
Then into its mamma's arms 'twill creep.
Hush-a-bye, baby—hush!

Down by its brink is a low, soft mound,
And the grasses are wet with dew;
The breezes stir them to tender sound.
There's a sigh in my song to you.
The voice is still—but the smile is here—
All that is left of a lost sweet year.
Sleep—on your cheek is a dried-out tear.
Hush-a-bye, baby, ah hush!

MABEL GREGG.

A POET in Rome, who has written the longest poem ever recorded, 25,000 verses, says proudly that his poem describes three visits to Hell, while Dante in his "Inferno" describes only one. Well, there's some places we wouldn't care to visit more than once even to pick up our pajama pants or our toothbrush that we forgot when we were there the first time.

THE WARDEN of Sing Sing prison says that by the time a man reaches the age of forty-five he recognizes the futility of crime. Maybe, but even then he doesn't recognize the absolute hopelessness of finding a place to park downtown.

SONNET.

Now let me never again with craven sigh
Give up my nights to listening for his tread,
The double sound of footsteps dragging by,
Triumphant Death and his reluctant dead;
When joy no longer blossoms for the taking
And we are dead to every hope of spring,
And love is old and hearts are near to breaking
And wind in winter is a hated thing,
When to this breath that we were masters of
We are made slaves, and lift our heads no more,
And all the gentle brightnesses of love
Fall upon faded eyes, so clear before,
Offend not Death by whom our chains are broken;
Welcome him in with greetings fitly spoken,

"SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS," so the Saturday papers told us, "called at the White House to pay his respects to the President. METHODS OF MEASURING COMFORT.

IT IS accepted that men will do more work and make fewer mistakes if the air of the workshop is of good quality, and right as to temperature, humidity, and currents. This applies to office workers as well as those who are employed in factories. This is known to employers and employés, to teachers and pupils—yet getting at the facts in the individual case and applying the remedy has not been easy.

The instrument usually employed for taking temperatures is the ordinary wall thermometer. However, using that instrument is oftentimes unsatisfactory. A man, feeling uncomfortable and no account, would look at the thermometer and find a reading which indicated that conditions were not as they should be. He would conclude that as a measurer of comfort the ordinary thermometer was a liar and the truth was not in it.

Those who lost faith in ordinary thermometers as measurers of comfort next tried wet bulb thermometers. This instrument was a great improvement over its predecessor, but it was found to have shortcomings. The next step in the progression was an instrument called the kathathermometer. This was found to have a field, but it, too, had some shortcomings.

These, W. S. Weeks thinks, will be remedied by a device which he calls a coolometer, which was worked out in the University of California, where it has been given a pretty fair trial. It is claimed for it that it is very delicate, that it works equally well in either dry or wet air, and that it can be made to register automatically. It is not especially suited to any use except factories, large offices, and perhaps schools.

The purpose of any such instrument is to reveal conditions and to interest the people most concerned, the hope being that efforts to improve ventilation will follow. Improvements in ventilation procedures are being made about as rapidly as the demand requires. In commercial establishments where perfect ventilation is essential, for instance in the refrigeration industry, the standards set are met and maintained. If the demand for good ventilation in places where it is people and not products that are to be considered they will get what they want, provided they are obstinate.

ALL DEPENDS ON CAUSE.

A. E. writes:

1. Is it dangerous for the heart to beat 120 to 140 per minute if there is apparently no ill effect except nervousness?
2. What causes the heart to feel as though it jumps and then pauses a beat?
3. Would this cause sudden death?
4. Is a nervous heart serious?
5. Can this condition be remedied? I am in good health, look well and never faint, but have this disagreeable heart condition.

REPLY.

1. Not of itself. That which causes the rapid beat may be dangerous and generally is harmful.
2. The symptom is commonly known as palpitation. It has many causes. Among them are goitre, nervous heart due to excessive use of tobacco and possibly coffee, possibly nervousness, auricular fibrillation and some other nerve disturbances of the heart, and organic heart disease.
3. Probably not.
4. It may be. The cause determines that.
5. As a rule it can be.

BONE CYSTS.

D. A. C. writes:

1. What is a bone cyst?
2. Is there danger of tuberculosis of bone or malignant trouble?
3. Would it go to any other part of the body?

REPLY.

1. A cyst located in the bone. Some cases formerly diagnosed as bone cysts are a bone disease in which the bones become spongy.
2. No. Bone cysts are not related to either tuberculosis or cancer.
3. To no other parts except bone.

COMPENSATION ACT.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been told that under the compensation act a person injured while on the job should secure 50 per cent of his weekly wages up to $30. Is this correct? C. H. H.

The compensation act provides: "If the period of temporary total incapacity for work lasts for more than six working days, compensation equal to fifty per centum of the earnings, but not less than $7.50 nor more than $15.00 per week, beginning on the eighth day of such temporary total incapacity and continuing as long as the temporary total incapacity lasts, but not after the amount of compensation paid equals the amounts which would have been payable as a death benefit. Provided, that in the cases where temporary total incapacity for work continues for a period of four weeks from the day of the injury, then compensation shall commence on the day after the injury."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COMPENSATION ACT.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If a certain man, who has worked in a factory for eighteen years, should drop dead in this same factory as soon as he had finished his work and was ready to depart for home, is the factory liable in any way for his death? Is there any compensation of any kind due? The man was not insured by the firm. 2. Can an undertaker embalm a body before notifying the dead man's folks? If not, what action can be taken against him?

S. P. H.

1. Not on the bare facts stated. The compensation act applies only to injuries arising out of and in the course of employment. At common law there is no recovery in absence of proof of negligence on the part of the defendant.
2. Of course, it is physically possible. The legal propriety of such course would depend on all the facts, as to accessibility of the relatives, probable date of the funeral, etc.

DEBRIS TO BE REMOVED.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—[Friend of the People.]—I wonder if you can assist me in finding out just when the proper authorities intend to remove the débris from in front of our property. This consists of old pieces of torn up sidewalks, etc. Aside from the unsightly appearance it also prevents our attempts to restore the lawns and trees which were destroyed by the recent Glenwood sewer project.

E. C.

Sewer was installed in Glenwood avenue some time ago and the paving of the roadway in this block is practically completed. All débris, etc., will be removed by the contractor from the parkway within the next week or ten days at the latest.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 14, 1915.

CHICAGO.—Two men and a woman were burned to death and several persons were severely injured in a fire at 55 East Grand avenue. Many of the occupants of the three story brick rooming house were forced to jump for their lives.

LONDON.—An Amsterdam dispatch says: "Reports from Vienna say that the American note concerning the sinking of the Ancona has caused intense anger in the Austrian government, and a diplomatic rupture is considered probable." Another Vienna dispatch received at Zurich says that Austrian political circles consider the note as going much too far.

WASHINGTON.—Austria will disavow the killing of American passengers on the Ancona and offer to pay an indemnity, according to a high official representing the Teutonic powers here. If such action is taken it will satisfy two of the demands made by President Wilson in the Ancona note. On the third demand—the punishment of the submarine commander—it is expected Austria will report inability to comply because of the loss of the submarine and its crew.

BERLIN.—The Anglo-French forces that have been defending the southern part of Serbia have been entirely expelled from Macedonian territory, it was officially announced. In addition to the occupation of Doiran and Grevgell by the army commanded by Gen. Todoroff, it is declared that two British divisions [40,000 men] were nearly wiped out during the advance.

LONDON.—The British and French troops have successfully carried out their retirement from Serbia across the Greek frontier, and by arrangement with the Greek government a clear road has been left for them to fall back on Saloniki, which is being organized as a base. Accounts from Athens and Saloniki say the retreat was carried out in an orderly manner and without heavy loss.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 14, 1901.

WASHINGTON. — The decision of the Schley court of inquiry was made public by Secretary Long. The court is divided. Rear Admiral Schley comes out of the affair convicted on almost every count by a majority of the court, but coupled with this sweeping condemnation is a remarkable and individual eulogy by Admiral George Dewey in which the hero of Manila declares that Schley was in sole command at Santiago and that he is entitled to the glory of that splendid victory. Admiral Dewey, however, coincides with the court in the belief that in many things before the battle Schley was blamable but he differs with the court on a number of points. Technically speaking Schley is officially condemned by a court of his brother officers, but they themselves recommend that owing to the time which has elapsed there should be no further proceedings in the matter. There is no appeal from the finding of the court but there almost certainly will be an investigation by congress. Rear Admirals Benham and Ramsay made the majority report of the court.

WASHINGTON. — Mrs. Lola Ida Hemry Bonine was acquitted of the murder of James Seymour Ayres, of the census office, who was shot and killed in his room in the Kenmore hotel on May 15 this year. Mrs. Bonine claimed that she had gone to Ayres' room to take him some medicine and talk over a quarrel they had had when he threw his arm around her and threatened her with a revolver. In the struggle she said that the gun was discharged and he was killed.

CHICAGO.—Chicago experienced an old-fashioned snow storm, the first taste of the cold wave forecast by Prof. Cox. Transportation on the cable lines was tied up. The electric surface lines also suffered as did the elevated system. The prediction is that the mercury will be below zero all day today.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 14, 1881.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Logan reported favorably from the committee on military affairs his bill for placing Gen. Grant on the retired list.

BOSTON.—The Republicans gained an important victory in the municipal elections here by electing their candidate for mayor, Dr. Samuel A. Green, over Albert Palmer, Butler Democrat, by a majority of 582. The vote was light, only 37,000 going to the polls.

WASHINGTON. — The cross-examination of Dr. Spitza, Guiteau's expert on insanity, was concluded and resulted in badly damaging the case which he had made for the assassin on the previous day. His "pertness" seemed to make a bad impression on the jury and Guiteau's indorsement of his statement that the assassin was certainly insane tended to show that Guiteau was fully capable of comprehending his present position at least. Spitza was followed by Dr. Perdyce Barker of New York, who declared positively that he thought Guiteau was fully responsible for his crime.

ATLANTA. — The remains of the Rev. Frank Quarles, the best known and probably the mostly highly esteemed colored minster of the south, reached here from Flushing, N. Y., where he died a few days ago, and were buried in Oakland cemetery. The body was followed to the grave by fully 3,000 persons, the largest funeral ever seen in Atlanta. Several leading white ministers of the city took part in the exercises, as Quarles was as well liked and respected by the white people of the south as by those of his own color.

VIENNA.—Twenty-seven more bodies were removed from the ruins of the Ring theater and a quantity of fragments of bodies, feet, and hands, which had not been burned in the fire that destroyed the playhouse, was also found. The list of missing is still kept up as high as 1,150 persons.

R. F. D.

Stanford, Ill., Dec. 8.—Postmaster General Brown says there is a deficit, and the only remedy he can think of is to raise letter rates to 3 cents. Nearly every rural postoffice has two or more rural route carriers. Their routes were established when roads were bad and autos not yet common, the horse and buggy being the universal mode of conveyance, and these routes have been little changed since. The result is that with present good roads and cheap autos these rural route carriers complete their routes and the day's work in less than three hours. When roads are blocked in winter they don't go at all. For this three hour day they receive about $7 pay, so that their net incomes now exceed their neighbors' with thousands invested. Two routes should be combined (perhaps $25 raise per month for additional car expense) and one carrier released. Millions could be easily saved in Illinois alone. GEO. LITCHFIELD.

POSTAL RATES.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—I noticed the Associated Press article published in your paper stated that Postmaster General Brown is going to advocate an advance to two and one-half or possibly three cents postage on first class mail or letters in order to offset the deficit in the postoffice department. There is no deficit caused by first class mail; in fact, first class mail shows a profit to the postoffice department.

However, we notice that no mention was made of the fact that practically the entire deficit was caused by low rates of postage on magazines and newspapers. Why not raise the rates on newspapers and magazines, where raises properly belong and where a deficit is caused?

I doubt if even the broad-minded CHICAGO TRIBUNE will publish this letter.

THE SOFT SPOT.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—The Chicago school board is throwing another smoke screen before the eyes of the public. It will economize by reducing educational expenditures, but not a word is said about other expenditures. The Normal school and Crane college will be closed. It is even suggested that all the schools will be closed a month or two at a saving of several millions. Nothing, however, is said about pruning the heavily padded "civil service" pay roll.

The board employs one civil service employe to every three and a half teachers. There are four thousand or more civil service employes and 14,000 teachers. In New York City only 14 per cent of the educational fund is used to pay janitors, engineers, clerks and other civil service workers. Chicago uses 28 per cent of its educational fund for these workers. This amount should be cut by one-half. A million a month is needed for these workers, while only three and a half million is used to defray the cost of instruction—the real business of the schools. M. L. R.

THEATER TICKETS.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—I notice some of your readers kick about the discourtesy of theater box office attendants and inability to secure decent seats. Mail order is a sure cure for all ills. There is no need to feel afraid of the man behind the grille, as you don't have to face him. There is no need to feel cheap because you don't care to pay for main floor seats. Nine chances out of ten you'll get just exactly the seats you ask for. ALYS DOLIN.

THE RELIEF FUND.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Is there any reason why Mr. Britton Budd's elevated riders should not be charged one cent on each fare, the cent to go to unemployment relief? Can he explain why that is not as fair as making the poor motorist pay it? On a $400 car the tax is as high as $50 a year and yet they kick about real estate taxes. What a joke. GEORGE GERBER.

HALF A YEAR SINCE PAY DAY.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—"Disgusted Teacher" says in her letter that no other city employés should be paid until the teachers are paid. Does she know that one division of city employés—the west park employés—have gone almost twenty-six weeks without one cent of salary?

OPTIMISTIC.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—May I voice a protest against the hideous and uninspiring so-called "decorations" that have been put up on State street for a so-called carnival?

I do not know who is responsible for these ugly concoctions, but if they are intended to stimulate a Christmas spirit and Christmas buying some one has made a very grievous psychological blunder. There is nothing that even suggests Christmas or the Christmas spirit, and I venture to say that the presence of these ugly things will decrease rather than increase Christmas sales along State street.

I understand they were devised by some Russian. One wonders why State street merchants or any other people in Chicago should turn to such a mind for the stimulation of the real Christmas spirit.

These so-called decorations are not only not beautiful, but they are not even funny. They are simply ugly and out of all harmony with the Christmas season.

EDWIN J. RANDALL, S. T. D.,
Executive Secretary, Diocesan Council of Chicago.

A STOLEN CAR.

Chicago, Dec. 3.—We drive to the live stock show and naturally park as close to the main entrance as we can, which is less than one block south on Halsted street, and three young hoodlums pile on the running board. ["Watch your car, mister; watch your car?"] Knowing their kind, we knew better than to give one 25 cents and nothing to the other two, so we take a chance and give nothing.

After we learn at the police station that ours was the eighteenth car stolen from there that evening, we have decided that if we ever get our car back we will either pay all the hoodlums that approach us or keep away from large public gatherings.

I pay $13 per year for state license, $10 a year for city license, and approximately $70 per year for gas tax to operate my car, and for a total of $93 per year I would like permission from the city of Chicago to park my car in the streets free, where and whenever it is not prohibited by law.

R. M. LAMBETH.

UNWEPT, UNHONORED, AND UNSUNG.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—To me, and doubtless to many others, it was somewhat amusing to read in the "Voice of the People," Dec. 6, a letter by Charles A. Livingston regarding the fate of the Ferris wheel of World's Fair fame. The writer says that in an article describing it some time afterward, he made the front page of THE TRIBUNE, his article starting off with the quotation: "Unwept, Unhonored, and Unsung." The amusing part of Mr. Livingston's letter, however, is in the addendum in which he naively says he found out some years after that this quotation was from Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country." Now without any desire to embarrass Mr. Livingston, but lest some one might be led astray at some inconvenient time by his assertion, I would respectfully point out that the lines quoted are not from the pen of Edward Everett Hale but were written by Sir Walter Scott in his famous poem, "Breathes there the man with soul so dead," etc.

JAMES CONWELL.

TO END THE DEPRESSION.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Let's end this depression. No, not with charity games and relief drives, or bank pools and the like, but by instilling the Christmas spirit in the hearts of Chicagoans. Let's have glee clubs and choruses singing in the streets, radio talks on the Christmas spirit, carol programs in Grant park. If we all pitch in and help by having musical programs [music hath charms], and all do our part we will find that the depression will disappear in this air.

SEVENTH FELON IN PRISON BREAK ELUDES PURSUIT

Warden Tells of Threat to Bomb Prison.

Leavenworth, Kas., Dec. 13.—(AP)—A 41 year old desperado, the only one of seven Leavenworth prison convicts who made good an escape from pursuit that brought back three dead, one wounded and two unscathed, was still at large today.

United States penitentiary guards have given up organized search for Earl Thayer, who was serving a 25 year sentence for an Oklahoma mail train robbery when he and the other six prisoners made a sensational dash for liberty Friday with Warden Thomas B. White as hostage.

Guards dispatched hurriedly to investigate a report that a man had stayed Friday night in a vacant farmhouse 25 miles west of here, near Winchester, Kas., were called back to the prison last night, and today the sabbath quiet prevailed over the scene.

Escapes from Hounds.

Prison officials said not a trace of Thayer was found yesterday. The last admission of his presence in the vicinity of the Emerson Salisbury farmhouse, eight miles west of here, where three prisoners died apparently from bullet wounds inflicted by one of their number, was his coat found by bloodhounds about a half mile from the house.

Warden White regarded Thayer as the most desperate of the seven and named him as the man who repeatedly urged the others that Whites should be killed.

Developments of the next few days will determine if it will be necessary to amputate Warden White's left arm, physicians said tonight. Even if the arm is saved it will be crippled. He may have partial use of his hand, it was announced. The warden suffered a relapse yesterday from his wounds but had improved today.

Tells of Dynamite Threat.

A convict's threat to blow up the prison entrance with dynamite caused the warden to issue the order releasing the seven convicts and their seven hostages to the outer world, Mrs. White revealed. The prisoner, Mrs. White said her husband told her, had lighted a match and said he would touch it to a short fuse in a stick of dynamite he brandished if the main gate were not opened.

At an autopsy William Green, Kansas City mail robber was named as the slayer of his two companions, Grover C. Durrill and George Curtis, and himself when they were surrounded in the Salisbury farmhouse. Officials believed if Thayer had remained, he too would have been killed by Green when the leader realized escape was hopeless and chose to die rather than surrender.

2 DEAD ST. LOUIS MEN FOUND ON ILLINOIS ROAD

Auto in Ditch Occupied by Two Women.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—Tom Saranita, 27, and Sam Albrizzi, 28, St. Louis men, were shot to death in a side road near Glenarm, 13 miles south of Springfield, late today.

Authorities laid the double killing to extension of St. Louis gang warfare to Sangamon county.

Both men were killed by shotgun charges and their bodies left by the side of the road about two and one-half miles west of route 124, north of Glenarm. The bodies were discovered by Thomas Ford, who resides, on the Ray Stout farm near Glenarm, shortly before 5 p. m. Stout reported the finding of the bodies to Sheriff Sam T. Metcalf.

Wives Found in Car.

Two women, who said they were the wives of Saranita and Albrizzi, were found by the sheriff's party sitting in an automobile a mile and a half east of the spot where the bodies were found. The women were held for questioning. They said they had not been molested.

The women, Mary Saranita and Eda Albrizzi, related to Assistant State's Attorney Lee Ensel the incidents leading up to the killing.

According to Mrs. Saranita and Mrs. Albrizzi, they were with their husbands, who drove to Springfield from St. Louis to visit at the home of William Rath, 1238 Sangamon avenue, a brother of Mrs. Saranita. They ate dinner at the Rath home and remained there until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, according to their story, and then started to drive back to St. Louis.

They said their automobile had been forced off the road by a large black sedan and that one man pointed a pistol at their husbands and abducted them.

Forced Off Road.

The man with the pistol held a coat across his face as a mask, they said, and they did not recognize him or his companions.

Authorities held the theory that both men were killed as a result of a slot machine war in St. Louis and Springfield.

Backgammon Game Ends in Knife Slashing Affray

The game played last night in Mike Gorgoff's coffee shop at 824 West Adams street between Peter Ivanoff, 40 years old, of 111 South Ashland boulevard, and Peter Dobreff, 45, of 127 South Halsted street, was friendly until Ivanoff made what was intended as a triumphant move. Then Dobreff slashed Ivanoff with a knife, police said, slitting the latter's left eye ball. Dobreff is sought. The game was backgammon.

FATHER FINDS YOUNG MURDER VICTIM IS SON

A father last night identified a murdered youth, found in a hallway at 911 Wellington avenue late Saturday night, as his son, Battiste Del Campo, 18 years old.

The father, Thomas Del Campo, 50 years old, 1315 Cleveland street, a laborer, told Lieut. Axel Jensen in the Sheffield avenue police station that he had read of a boy shot and thrown into a hallway. His own son was missing, he said. Lieut. Jensen produced the garments of the slain boy and Del Campo identified them as his son's. Several hours earlier an anonymous caller telephoned police the name of the youth, but hung up before he could be asked about the address.

Young Del Campo's slaying mystified police. He had no police record, and his father asserted he kept no evil associations. Detectives think the youth may have been taken for a ride.

PLAN NEW COURSE FOR NILE IN VAST IRRIGATION JOB

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 13.—A by-pass at least 350 miles long on the upper Nile to divert the waters from the absorbent sands of the Sudd area is expected to be the outcome of an aerial survey which has just been completed over an area of 30,000 square miles.

[In its course through the eastern Sudan the Nile is obstructed by vast masses of floating vegetable matter, tangled and matted, which are a barrier to vessels. Efforts have been made recently to break up these obstructions, which are known as sudds.]

The by-pass plan is expected to supersede a plan for a canal, but whichever project is ultimately carried out will be accompanied by the construction of a big dam at the northern end of Lake Albert. It is all part of a vast scheme to irrigate great parts of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Egypt, and the Sahara.

The work of air photography occupied 20 months. The only people with which the survey party dealt were nomadic tribes entirely untouched by civilization and unconcerned with money. The chief item of barter was soft iron and copper wire which the natives used to make into bracelets.

RECALLS DRYS' FORMER TACTICS TO PLAGUE THEM

Curran Revives Promises Made Years Ago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—How the swelling demand for a resubmission of the prohibition question to the states has turned the tables on the professional dry, is disclosed in a letter Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, has addressed to each senator and representative in congress.

Mr. Curran quotes the utterances fifteen years ago of Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], co-author of the eighteenth amendment; Bishop James Cannon Jr., the Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, and Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W. C. T. U., to show that if their advice then were to prevail today the drys in congress would regard it their duty to vote for a resolution submitting to the states an amendment repealing prohibition.

"I am writing you," Mr. Curran's letter said, "to call to your attention an example of dry tactics. According to Senator Sheppard and his dry adjutants—Bishop Cannon, the Rev. Dinwiddie, and Mrs. Boole—it was all right in 1914 for a member of the congress who did not believe in national bone dry prohibition to join nevertheless in submitting to the people for decision an amendment installing such national bone dry prohibition. But now, in 1931, they say, it is all wrong for a member of the congress who may personally favor national bone dry prohibition to join in submitting to the people for decision the question of repeal of this 18th amendment."

Sheppard in 1917.

The quotation of Senator Sheppard is from a speech he made in the senate July 30, 1917:

"As I view the matter," said Senator Sheppard, "the member of either branch of the American congress who denies the power of amendment to the states, especially an amendment which vast numbers of the people desire the states to consider violates the basic principles both of the constitution and of popular government, repudiates the fundamental rights of the states and overturns the two most

George Minnick, 203 Seminary avenue, a cab driver, overheard what he said was an ominous discussion between two passengers in his taxi last night. The discussion concerned him. Moreover, through the cab mirror he saw the reflection of a revolver in the hands of one of the fares.

Driver Minnick decided on action. He halted his cab sharply in front of the station house of Engine company 4, at 1244 North Halsted street, rushed inside, and shouted: "There are a couple of guys planning to stick me up in my cab."

Fireman Edward Spiering dropped his pinochle cards, and ran outside. He reached the cab, grabbed the two occupants by the collars and whacked their heads together. Then he picked up a loaded revolver on the seat. He dragged the prisoners into the station where they identified themselves as Robert Simpson, 4655 Magnolia avenue, and James Hopkins, 924 Windsor avenue. Both are Negroes. They were turned over to the Hudson avenue police.

scared privileges the people possess, the privileges of referendum and petition."

Bishop Cannon, appearing before the senate judiciary committee, April 16, 1914, said the time had come to allow the states to decide whether they wanted national prohibition, adding that "whenever it becomes evident that a large percentage of the people desire an opportunity to express themselves upon a great question the body in whose hands is committed the right to decide whether the people shall have that opportunity should at least divide the responsibility with the people as to the decision of that question."

Dinwiddie in 1914.

Before the same committee May 1, 1914, the Rev. Mr. Dinwiddie, then an official of the Anti-Saloon league, said no senator or representative by voting to submit the prohibition amendment would be committed to prohibition.

"He can vote," he said, "as a citizen of his state, as he chooses when it comes to a final decision on the question, when submitted to the various states for approval or rejection. In other words, we are simply asking that congress, under the terms of the constitution, give the people a chance to vote on this proposition by a referendum through their state legislatures. Congress therefore is not asked to pass on the policy of prohibition or non-prohibition, license or no license."

Mrs. Dodge before the house judiciary committee Dec. 11, 1913, asked that congress give "the people of the states the right to pass judgement" on national prohibition, adding:

"The people have a right to be heard. All the people have a right to be heard. All the people have never had a chance to be heard and this proposed amendment will give them that chance."

Writer Draws a Lesson.

Mr. Curran closed his letter with the observation that "after these last twelve years, of bootlegging, corruption, speakeasies, racketeering, hypocrisy, murder and destruction of necessary national revenue which have accompanied the attempt to enforce the unenforceable 18th amendment" even bone dry legislators may well deem it their duty to vote for resubmission of the question.

"The duty of a member of congress is no different in 1931 from what it was in 1914," the letter concludes. "But the Anti-Saloon league threatens to punish you for doing in 1931 what it begged you to do in 1913. It all depends upon which foot the shoe is on."

BODY OF BOY IN CANAL POINTS TO TRIPLE TRAGEDY

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

BALBOA, C. Z., Dec. 13.—The discovery of the body of Charles A. Roach Jr., 5 year old American boy, floating in the Panama canal here today, points to a triple tragedy involving his father, 36 years old, and his sister, 5. It is believed the father drove an automobile in which all were riding off the pier.

Roach, who was a sanitary inspector, had had domestic trouble recently and was fined $30 for beating his second wife, Mrs. Martha Roach. He told her after the trial last Thursday that she would not need to get a divorce because she would be rid of him in a few days.

He was last seen that night with the children in a small motor car. He had tried vainly to find a place in the home of friends and at the home of Mrs. Roach's mother for the children to sleep. The police searched the harbor all day for further signs of Roach and his daughter.

ORGANIZE DIXIE TO BATTLE FOR DRY LAW REPEAL

Rich Virginians Pledge to Finance Move.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—Determined to perfect an organization that will extend all over Virginia and into the south for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, a delegation of leading Virginians gathered at a dinner in the Monticello hotel.

Those in attendance included Fergus Reid, New York-Norfolk millionaire cotton broker; Col. Charles H. Conselve, hotel operator of Norfolk, Baltimore and Richmond; Robert Johnston, president of the Old Dominion Paper company, and wealthy; L. H. Windholtz, president Baltimore Steam Packet company and the D. P. Chain stores, and State Senator James S. Barron.

Plan to Extend Organization.

Plans were adopted and finances guaranteed to insure a working organization in every county in Virginia and all the southern states.

"We probably will extend the organization all over the United States," said Senator Barron. "We believe, and there are millions of others who believe, that existing conditions under prohibition are intolerable."

Gen. W. H. Cooke, former commandant at the Virginia Military Institute, was elected president of the Virginia organization, which is to be known as the Virginia Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment. Fergus Reid was named chairman of the finance committee and Robert Johnston made a member.

Replies to Questionaire.

Senator Barron said 2,000 postal cards were mailed to Virginians only two weeks ago and that 1,400 replied that they wanted to see prohibition killed and would become members of the Virginia organization. Former United States Senator J. W. Wadsworth of New York, is to address a meeting in Richmond on Dec. 17, in the interests of the new organization and a similar one to be composed of women.

BOY FOUND HANGING IN TREE SOON AFTER LEAVING CHURCH

Northeast Harbor, Maine, Dec. 13.—[Special.]—The body of Everett Allen, 14 year old son of Arthur Allen of Northeast Harbor, was found today hanging from a tree on the summer estate of Mrs. Harriet Rome Elling of Philadelphia.

The fact that the lad's hands had been tied behind his back with a piece of strong cord only served to muddle still further a case which Sheriff Ward B. Wescott of Hancock county frankly described as the most baffling in his long official career.

Young Allen, who was a Boy Scout, left Sunday school for his home about noon and his body was found three hours later by Everett Robinson, who saw it dangling from the tree. The feet were barely touching the ground and nearby on the turf lay a pair of blue "shorts" whose ownership is unknown.

The boy was an expert at tying scout knots and the only possible theory at present in connection with his death is that he may have been showing off before some other lads, that something went wrong, and that the others, finding he was dead, fled in fright.

County officials will question the boy's friends tomorrow.

Cigar Store Owner Dies from Blow of Robber

Jr. J. Pollack, 52 years old, proprietor of a cigar store at 1122 West 14th street, died yesterday at Mount Sinai hospital of skull injuries received Dec. 5 at the hands of Horace Grigsby, 16 year old Negro, during an attempted holdup. Grigsby, who had just escaped from St. Charles reformatory, was arrested on the scene by Policeman Edward Hazzard.

NEW YORK WILL FIGHT U. S. PLANS ON ST. LAWRENCE

Two-Stage Dam Project Is Opposed.

New York, Dec. 13.—[Special.]—The New York state power authority will oppose the two-stage dam plan for the development of the hydro-electric resources of the St. Lawrence river, recommended by American Engineers in recent conferences between the state department at Washington and Canadian authorities, Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the power authority, said today at a dinner of the St. Lawrence County Society of New York here.

FRANK P. WALSH. [Acme Photo.]

Much as the state desires to cooperate with the Canadian and United States authorities, the power authority is directed by law, Mr. Walsh explained, to follow the plan prepared by the New York State Engineering board, headed by the late Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, former chief of United States army engineers. This plan provided for only a single flight of locks.

Calls N. Y. Plan Best.

Mr. Walsh defended the New York plan for single dam development, asserting it had many advantages over the two-stage plan being discussed in Washington.

"In construction costs alone $70,000,000 would be saved under the New York plan, Mr. Walsh said, while a pool making possible a maximum of sailing speed would be provided for vessels instead of a succession of canals in which ships may pass only at reduced speed.

The New York plan also eliminates the hazard of building a dam in the swift channel of the river, as the dam would be built on dry land and the river taken to it, Mr. Walsh added.

"The power authority," said Mr. Walsh, "has not been content merely to accept the engineering board's plan, but it has called into consultation some of the country's most eminent engineers, not only to recheck its engineering details but also to advise on the economic utilization of the power to be generated.

Given Leeway for Action.

"The power authority is directed by law to follow this plan. It is, however, empowered to make such changes in the engineering plans as shall be necessary for agreement with the proper Canadian and United States authorities, or as it may itself find desirable upon further study."

Mr. Walsh said it gave him pleasure to report that although not all matters in dispute between the federal government and the power authority as to the respective rights of the two agencies in the waters of the river had been settled, "substantial progress has been made toward an agreement."

ITALY TAXES ONE AND ALL IN WAR ON HARD TIMES

Mussolini Fights to Keep Nation's Chin Up.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 13.—Premier Mussolini's government has been making a gallant struggle against hard times, which are becoming more aggravated as winter advances. That this would be one of the hardest winters Italy has been called upon to face was foreseen as early as August with huge expenditures for public works to provide employment. By October the menace of distress had become such that Pope Pius issued an encyclical calling for a crusade of charity to cope with a "calamitous winter in which it is to be feared the plague of unemployment may increase."

When England went off the gold standard in September, Italian business was placed in a quandary. Many critics of the monetary policy, who have maintained that the stabilization of the lira at 19 to the dollar was not in keeping with the actual value of the lira, demanded that the mistake be rectified. But Mussolini and his advisers decided that the lira must hold and took immediate steps to fortify it.

Cost of Living Leaps.

The Bank of Italy began recalling gold deposits and the monetary system was changed from a gold exchange basis to the gold standard proper. At the same time another 10 per cent tariff increase was decreed, ostensibly to increase treasury receipts against a widening deficit, but actually as a barricade against British dumping.

But these measures raised the cost of living and so were ineffective in forestalling the evils of unemployment and distress. By the end of October unemployment was admitted to be around 800,000, but is actually believed to be considerably higher.

At that same time, Mussolini hinted at a radical change in economic policy, declaring the capitalistic system wrecked. He asserted, however, that he would maintain a policy equally remote from bolshevism and liberalism and promised he would devote his attention to improve the lot of the people. He refused to permit another general wage cut, such as had taken place last year.

General Conditions Revealed.

The general economic conditions of Italy, which gave rise to Mussolini's promises and the important moves which he has since made, are, roughly:

1. A rising internal public debt which stood at 88,102,000,000 lire on June 30, 1930, and at 92,328,000,000 on Oct. 31, 1931.

2. Increasing budget deficit. The deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, was 298,000,000 lire, to which is now added a treasury deficit of 1,147,000,000 as of Oct. 31, 1931.

3. Increasing number of industrial and commercial failures.

4. Shrinkage in trade. The country imported 23 billion lire worth of goods in 1928; last year this dropped to 17 billions and for the first ten months of this year it is under 10 billions. Exports have dropped from 11 billions in 1930 to 8 billions for the first ten months of this year.

Jobless Total Rises.

5. Increase in unemployment, which on Oct. 31 stood at 730,764, of which 216,000 received state subsidies. This figure is the official one and does not represent the actual number of people out of work, which exceeds 1,000,000.

6. A wide gap between wholesale and retail prices laid in some measure to burdensome increases in taxation.

7. Stock exchange dealings at a virtual standstill.

8. A general slump in stock prices.

9. Long term credit has been almost nonexistent and short term credit difficult and interest rates high.

How It Weathers Storm.

In view of these facts many ask: How does the lira hold and how is Italy able to bear the economic brunt?

First, there is the unhampered driving power of Mussolini, who, with his Fascist system, is able to discipline any one whenever he likes. Thus highly unpopular measures may be adopted if Mussolini and his advisers deem them to be of general benefit to Fascism or the country.

Second, the banking situation has been kept sound. Note circulation has been reduced to around 14 billion lire, and it is so restricted that the Bank of Italy is able to stop any attempted speculation abroad. Italy has comparatively little foreign capital invested here and has few short term foreign credits. Besides, the gold reserves of the Bank of Italy are being gradually increased and now exceed 38 per cent.

Resigned to Their Fate.

Third, the Italian workingman has resigned himself to bear hardships in the belief that better times are coming.

Then, too, Italy's economic activities are chiefly agricultural. Ten million men, women, and children actually work at agriculture. Their standard of living is not high. In the rice districts of the north some workers actually earn about 20 cents a day. On the other hand, many of these own small plots of land, and there are districts of Italy totally uninfluenced by the ordinary cycle of economics.

Taxation is levied in various and ingenious forms and groans against its burden are arising throughout the peninsula and from all classes. Landed proprietors say they can stand nothing more because of the prevalent low prices of olives, wines, and wheat. Commerce objects to the 2½ per cent turnover tax. The ordinary citizen must pay a flat rent tax on his house. Besides, he pays a tax on each dog and each servant. Every one must pay a tax each time he or she moves from town to town; store proprietors pay a tax on window displays, and all professional people must pay a license tax for the right to maintain an office. This does not include the general income tax, the property tax, and the other multiple forms of indirect taxation, nor levies of various kinds by political or institutional bodies.

Fear Levy on Capital.

As all this does not supply enough revenue to make both ends meet there is a growing undercurrent of uneasiness lest the next step be a new levy on capital.

Thus the effect on the middle classes may be seen when it is estimated that the average salary of the government bureaucrat or minor army officer is around $50 per month.

Various methods of price fixing have also been elaborated. Recently a "rice institute" was set up. The price of rice is 450 lire per ton. But it costs 700 lire per ton to produce it. The institute fixes the price at 700 lire per ton. Similarly, wheat millers may not purchase foreign wheat without informing the district police.

RUSSIA SAVED BY U. S. TWICE; WILL WE DO IT AGAIN?

Europe Fears Americans May Give Reds Credit.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Dec. 13.—"America has twice saved bolshevism from collapse. Will she do it a third time?" This question is frequently put to Americans traveling through the Baltic countries.

America first saved the Red regime in Moscow, the Baltic inhabitants say, by assisting the communist party to pull through the famine of 1921. Then the American Relief administration distributed more than $60,000,000 worth of food, medicines and other supplies in Russia. What is not generally known is that the Reds broke the agreement signed with the American Relief administration and compelled the Americans to distribute a portion of the foodstuffs intended for starving children to railroad workers to insure the transport of supplies. This aid prevented the collapse of Russian transportation.

Saved Again in 1929.

The Baltic also holds the view that America again saved bolshevism in 1929, when Dictator Stalin inaugurated his five year plan to industrialize Russia and "to overtake and outstrip America." The soviet state plan commission in its report admitted Russia did not possess enough trained men to put the plan into execution, so thousands of American engineers, mechanics and other specialists were engaged. With the assistance of American specialists, Stalin was able to arouse the enthusiasm of the workers and the race to overtake and outstrip America began.

These Americans reorganized and greatly increased the production of the Donetz and Kuznetz coal basins. Out on the Lena river, in Siberia, they are operating the gold dredges Moscow confiscated from the Lena Gold Fields company of London. At Ridder, Siberia, they are directing the construction of gold, copper, and zinc mines.

American Starts Grain Race.

An American wheat rancher from Montana was employed to come to Russia and show the bolsheviki how to produce grain on a large scale by utilizing modern agricultural machinery and efficiency. His efforts were fateful. The grain ranch he organized was a success. It gave the bolsheviki the idea of organizing the collectivized farms.

In resisting the confiscation and amalgamation of their property into these communes, where each farmer, his wife, and his children earn the same wages, hundreds of thousands of the wealthier peasants were exiled with their entire families to the far north, to the Murmansk, Archangel, and Perm districts, and to Siberia. Thousands upon thousands were shot.

Hire Live Stock Breeders.

American engineers were employed at huge salaries to plan tremendous industrial plants to manufacture tractors, farming machinery and automobiles, ore reducing plants, railroads, factories and other buildings. One engineer, whose fee is said to reach seven figures, transferred most of his staff from New York to the Ukraine, where they are supervising the construction of the largest hydraulic power plant in the world and a huge network of metal plants and factories which will consume its power.

Live stock breeders were employed to teach the Russian how to breed pigs, cattle, sheep and poultry. Mechanics of all descriptions were imported to teach Russians how to operate machines. These American specialists helped Stalin to capture the support of the new generation and all Russia is concentrating its efforts to bring the five year plan to a successful conclusion.

Russia today needs foreign financial assistance. She not only needs new and even larger credits but she is asking that credits previously granted be prolonged. She has failed, up to now, in her negotiations with Germany, France, and England. So today bankers, manufacturers, and statesmen in the Baltic states and Poland are asking Americans if their country is again going to save bolshevism from collapse by granting Moscow financial aid.

Baltic Fears Result.

The speeches of Senator Borah and of Col. Hugh T. Cooper, the chief advocates of soviet recognition in America, are as closely followed in the Baltic as in Moscow. The possibility of such recognition sends cold shivers running up and down the spines of the Baltic statesmen, who declare it would give the bolsheviki the morale and money they need to continue Lenin's and Stalin's experiment in communism and help Russia to get itself into fighting trim to take on Europe in a fight to the death.

According to the latest available figures there are 12,000 foreign specialists in the employ of the soviet government. About 7,000 are Germans, 4,000 are Americans and the remaining thousand of other nationalities. The number of Americans is decreasing rapidly, for they invariably demand payment in dollars, while the Germans who are coming in to take their places are satisfied to work for soviet rubles.

RAID HOTEL, ARREST SEVEN FOR GAMBLING; TWO HELD IN BAIL

New York, Dec. 13.—[Special.]—In a raid on an apartment in the Sherry-Netherland hotel early today, police arrested seven men, two of whom were held for special Sessions court in bail of $500 each on a charge of operating a gambling resort.

The raid was made by members of the vice squad. The men could not be located later at the addresses given by them. According to the police blotter they were Lew Mason, real estate operator, and Henry Curtiss, "Speculator," John Woods and John Hope, William Donovan, Murray Saul and George Dupont.

All of them were arraigned before Magistrate Dodge in Yorkville court yesterday, Mason and Curtiss on charges of operating a gambling resort and the others on charge of disorderly conduct. All but Mason and Curtiss were dismissed by Magistrate Dodge.

CANADA EYEING TURNOVER TAX TO RAISE REVENUE

May Drop Levy on Sales for New Scheme.

BY STANLEY JACKSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 13.—Faced with the need of increasing revenue, Canada is now engaged in exploring the most feasible methods for so doing. The latest report is that the sales tax is to be abandoned and it will be substituted by a turnover tax. The revenue from the sales tax has been disappointing, government officials declare, owing to the depression. They estimate that one year's imposition of a turnover tax would pour about $80,000,000 into the treasury.

Last year when the government was making its budget plans it was reported that the sales tax would be dropped and a turnover tax substituted. But the government decided to retain the sales tax, increasing it from 1 to 4 per cent. At that time Canadian business protested loudly and the turnover tax proposal was dropped.

Faces 300 Million Deficit.

The need for this tax today, however, is insistent, government spokesmen state. The federal government is facing a deficit on current account of nearly $100,000,000, plus expenditures of $115,000,000 for the Canadian National Railways and $40,000,000 for jobless relief. Other items are expected to swell the total deficit to $300,000,000.

The national service loan, so successfully launched when $150,000,00 was asked and $215,000,000 subscribed, has prevented what would have been a serious matter in dominion finance, but will enable the government to carry on for a few months. Another domestic loan next year is not encouraged by big bankers.

Practically every walk in life in Canada is taking the depression on the chin, that is in lower returns, lower wages, and fewer luxuries. But the government is taking more. Taxes paid in 1930 took almost one-fifth of the national income, and the proportion for 1931 will be the highest in history. In other words Canadian taxes took one day's pay in ten, and now takes one day's pay in five.

Ontario to Cut Expenditures.

The province of Ontario has just announced it will cut expenditures by 10 per cent in 1932, and thereby save $5,000,000.

The turnover tax, applied to its theoretical limit, would levy an impost upon the gross sales of commodities and services of all business, whether manufacturing, wholesale, jobbing or retail, and whether mercantile, financial, or professional. It is applied not only at the initial and final stages of transactions, but all stages between the raw material and the consumer.

The difference between the sales tax and the turnover tax, as outlined in a report by the Citizens' Research Institute of Canada, follows:

"The percentage to be applied under the turnover tax is usually placed at 1 per cent at each stage, instead of 6 per cent at the most highly finished stage only, or varying percentages at one or more stages.

How Taxes Differ.

"The sales tax is applied to every individual sale at the time of the sale and involves a tremendous amount of calculation and adjustment. The turnover tax would be applied on the amount of gross sales of commodities or services at the end of each month, or three months, and would involve simply the determination of 1 per cent of the gross sales for the period specified. Any one keeping even single entry books or even a cash register could easily fill out the necessary form and calculate the size of the government's check."

THOMAS FEARS HE'LL SMASH THINGS, SO POLICE OBLIGE HIM

Thomas Gordon, 42 years old, from Belfast, Ireland, wavered into the Chicago avenue police station early yesterday.

"Lock me up," he told Desk Sergt. Thomas Phelan. "I'm drunk, and whenever I get drunk I go crazy and smash things."

INQUIRY BEGUN IN BOMBING OF MOVIE AT GARY

Robert G. Estill, prosecutor of Lake county, Indiana, said yesterday that he will make a full investigation of the bombing of the Family theater in Gary, which took place Saturday night while 800 people, including a large number of children, were attending a show. The bombing is believed to have grown out of union difficulties. The theater employs non-union operators.

"The authorities of this county will not stand by and see the lives of women and children endangered," Prosecutor Estill said.

He requested Gary police to place special guards at motion picture theaters in the city as a precaution against further outrages. Police officials said that they had not enough men to place a guard at each theater, but instructed patrolmen to give special attention to theaters on their beats.

Kill 1, Arrest 25 in Drive on Communists in Poland

WARSAW, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A communist was killed today when a secret service operative used his revolver in self defense against a group of radicals posting bills. Police arrested 25 persons today whose names were found on a list taken from the coat lining of a Communist agitator named Sinow, who was taken into custody when he arrived several days ago from Moscow by using a forged passport. Propaganda concerning a "hunger day" on Tuesday was confiscated.

CRIPPLE, 76, DIES IN LEAP.

Albert F. Rich, 70 years old, a cripple, leaped to his death yesterday from a fifth floor fire escape platform on the State House hotel, 507 South State street. A number of passersby saw him jump. Papers on his body indicated that his home was in St. Louis.

NEW YORK STATE FACING A DEFICIT OF 100 MILLION

nds Will Be Raised by Boosting Taxes.

ttica, N. Y., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—e state is facing a deficit in the ning fiscal year that will require e raising of new or additional taxes mounting to 100 million dollars, ac-rding to information given to Re-blican leaders who attended Chair-an Klaguband Macy's conference.

The speakers who made the revela-ion were Senator Charles J. Hewitt nd Assemblyman Eberly Hutchinson, hairman of the fiscal committees. It had been understood by all legislative eaders that a deficit was to be ex-pected, but not until this meeting did they get first hand any definite facts concerning it.

Task up to Governor.

Hewitt and Hutchinson cited in their addresses the funds appropriated for the current fiscal year and the prospective falling off in the revenues from sources of taxation during the 1932-'33 fiscal year which will begin on July 1.

From Albany it was reported au-thentically that, by the middle of Jan-uary, the state treasury virtually will be empty.

It will be the task of Gov. Roose-velt when he presents his budget re-port to the incoming legislature to point a way for raising the additional revenues to keep the state's adminis-trative machinery moving.

The legislature, of course, will be in a position to reject the governor's recommendations and provide for financing the state's needs in its own way, but from what was said by the Republican leaders there is no likeli-hood of any pronounced differences between the governor and the legisla-ture on the subject.

Plan Partly Worked Out.

Senator Seabury C. Mastick, West-chester, head of the commission that as given prolonged study to the sub-ect of taxation, told the lawmakers without entering into details that this body had worked out in part plans for raising an additional 100 millions from sources of indirect taxation aside from real estate.

Of course, the task of the Mastick commission does not have in view formulating a program for raising revenues to meet the present emer-gency growing out of the economic de-pression. Its object is to devise a permanent system of taxation to re-lieve real estate of part of the tax burden it has been carrying.

BANDITS MAKE FIVE TRIPS TO CART OFF LOOT

New York, Dec. 13.—A burglary by installments, in which two thieves made five trips in taxis to carry away loot from the establishment of John S. Sampson & Son, wholesale jewel-ers, was described today when the pair made a confession.

One of the burglars, Walter Wil-liams, admitted that if convicted he faces a life sentence under the Baumes law. When taken into cus-tody he begged a detective:

"Lend me your revolver. I'll get life, and I'd rather shoot myself."

Capt. Magyar, Sea Flyer, Honor Guest at Banquet

Capt. Alexander Magyar, who flew from Harbor Grace to the vicinity of Budapest last summer, was the guest of honor at a reception and dance, at-tended by 3,000 Chicagoans of Hun-garian descent, held in the Hotel Sher-man last night. Emil Szalay of Flint, Mich., financial sponsor of the flight, was one of the principal speakers at the party. City and county officials and representatives of the Chicago Association of Commerce attended.

CITY CAN'T SELL BONDS SO PUBLIC WORK IS HALTED

Connecticut Town Faces Finance Problem.

Greenwich, Conn., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—Local authorities here, failing to find a satisfactory market for bonds, have taken steps to postpone public works and improvements which would have cost more than $1,040,000 until the municipal bond market im-proves.

Other communities throughout the country are being hampered by the reluctance of bond houses to absorb issues which in normal times are ac-cepted eagerly and at good premiums.

Hence, officials here feel that the wisest course is to postpone a new school building program, the cost of which had been estimated at $1,200,-000; a municipal hospital program costing $250,000; a highway program calling for $50,000, and street drain-age which would have cost $40,000.

Continue Relief Program.

The only project which the board of estimate and taxation will undertake at once are a $175,000 unemployment relief program and an expenditure of $160,000 to widen Greenwich avenue. For these purposes the town authori-ties will endeavor to sell bonds at once. If no market is found, the work will be financed by short term certifi-cates of indebtedness. Most of the work, including the school program, had been hastened with a view to re-lieving unemployment.

The unemployment relief fund, which, it is estimated, will provide about 300 men with work, will be the only expenditure during early winter.

Drop School Construction.

Plans for the construction of a grammar school in Riverside and addi-tions to the Greenwich High school, the Hamilton Avenue school and the Bryan school are complete. The school board, in fact, was prepared to call for bids this week, but concurred in the decision of the municipal authorities that postponement of the projects was advisable.

Approximately 5,000 children in Greenwich will be affected by the school program. All are provided with school accommodations at present, al-though there is considerable crowding in several of the schools. In the high school double sessions daily are neces-sary. The second semester, which is expected to bring many more students into the school system, will increase the difficulties.

EVEN DIVORCE FAILS TO BARE PRODIGAL'S STORY

On the morning of April 13, 1928, Frank Dunbar kissed his wife and went away from his home near Plano. He had been married just two months and eight days. No more was heard of him until Aug. 10, 1931, when he galloped back on a high black horse. He was wearing a nine gallon hat, the chaps of a cowboy, high boots, and spurs. His wife, who was for-merly Miss Agnes Olson, a school teacher, fainted when she saw him, but Frank merely looked at her ca-sually and paid her no attention.

To this day, they say in Plano, the prodigal has advanced no information on where he spent the three years or where he got the horse. Mrs. Dunbar went before the Circuit court at York-ville on Saturday and obtained a di-vorce on the ground of desertion.

In court, still wearing the hat of his cowboy days, was Frank, but he didn't take the stand and Plano is still wondering.

Richard C. Hall, 75 years old, former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and a director of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, died last night at his residence at 1138 Judson avenue, Evanston, after an illness of three weeks.

He was active in business until about five years ago. Mr. Hall was born in Boston, entering upon a career there in the rubber materials business. Mr. Hall was interested in boyhood and was a trustee of the Boys' homes and the Lawrence Hall homes. He was also a trustee of the Sunday Evening club and a member of the Union League, Skokie Country, and Commercial clubs. He was formerly senior warden of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Evanston.

Surviving Mr. Hall are his widow, Mrs. Grace Hall; a son, Richard E. Hall of Olean, N. Y.; two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Hall Noyes, wife of George F. Noyes, and Miss Elizabeth Hall, and four grandchildren. Funeral arrangements will be announced today. The family requests that flowers be omitted.

JURY IS UNABLE TO SOLVE GUN DEATH OF YOUTH

A coroner's jury at Highland Park yesterday returned an open verdict in the death of James Willard Casey, 18 years old, 4645 North Le Claire avenue. The jurors found that he was killed by an unknown person, but were unable to determine whether the slaying was accidental or intentional.

The boy was found shot to death Saturday in the Hiawatha woods, three miles west of Deerfield. His father's shotgun, apparently the weapon with which he was killed, lay nearby. His hands were thrust in his overcoat pockets.

Thomas Kennedy, chief deputy sheriff of Lake county, said he believed the boy had gone hunting and had been accidentally shot by a companion, who fled from the scene. James left his home on Nov. 28, but his father, a city bridge tender, did not discover that the shotgun was missing until the body was found, he testified at the inquest.

GRAND JURY AND JUDGE RESUME BANK INQUIRIES

The investigation of closed banks will be carried on today by Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg, who is seeking hidden assets, and Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers, who is handling grand jury phases of the bank inquiries. Prosecutor Ayers said officials and debtors of a number of closed banks, the names of which he did not disclose, would be served with subpoenas this afternoon.

Judge Feinberg expects to conclude his investigation of the First Humboldt State bank tomorrow and will then take up the affairs of the Second Humboldt State bank. The two banks closed May 4 owing $3,000,000 to 23,000 depositors. One of the next banks to be investigated is the defunct Lake View State bank, 3179 North Clark street. Attorney Morton Jacobson yesterday pledged the cooperation of a depositors committee, representing 12,000 depositors, to Judge Feinberg.

One of the phases of the Bain bank inquiry will be resumed tomorrow when Howard W. Elmore, sanitary district trustee, is to appear before Judge Feinberg to report on his progress toward raising some $30,000. He has promised to liquidate properties of himself and associates to settle this claim against a trust he managed, which was taken over by John Bain, Inc., the Bain holding company.

John Bain is in a hospital and is not expected to be able to appear for questioning tomorrow.

Books Present Wilson Policies in State, Nation

As Governor and as Pre-War President.

"Woodrow Wilson: Life and Letters." 2 vols., by Ray Stannard Baker [Doubleday Doran]. Published today.

THESE are the third and fourth volumes [subtitled "Governor" and "President"] of the authoritative biography of Woodrow Wilson. In tone and in interpretation they equal the first two published in 1927.

RAY S. BAKER.

The emphasis, however, in these volumes is more on Wilson's political activities and less on his character and background. Through his activities his personality is revealed in an even clearer and more vivid light than in the descriptive and expository analyses of his character in the previous volumes.

The fourth volume ends with the death of the first Mrs. Wilson and with the declaration of war. It permits us with a new altogether comprehended Wilson, with a Wilson of great tenderness and kindness, of an unflinching devotion to duty, of impeccable honesty, and of growing diplomatic genius.

Previously unpublished papers and documents now made public for the first time authenticate the interpretations of a few early biographers. Wilson stands out in this biography as a great man and one of the supreme idealists of modern times.

The volume called "Governor" describing his entrance into politics is perhaps the more dramatic of the two. The author makes it evident that Wilson was reluctant to accept the proposal that he enter politics seriously, but convinced in his idealism that the country needed a progressive leader and that he could be that leader, and only after many months. Mr. Baker makes plain, did Wilson allow himself to be persuaded. The critics of Mr. Wilson's early political conduct should be silenced in the face of the author's evidences, with the help of letters and documents hitherto unpublished, of Wilson's complete honesty in his connection with the Democratic caucus. Mr. Baker shows that he was in no way compromised; that the bosses either demanded concessions from him (it fast until much later does concealed their intentions from him very carefully), nor did he promise them or their machine any support. This point is historically one of the important contributions of "The Life and Letters." Consequently Wilson felt no restraints. Mr. Baker makes clear, since there were no commitments, and when he assumed the governorship he bitterly fought the political bosses to the end, until he had broken their hold upon New Jersey politics. With the presentation of new material the author answers on this point both friends and critics of Wilson. Baker makes the reader see that the term "ingrate," so often applied to Wilson's behavior in this respect, is unjustified.

With his induction into office, Wilson immediately inaugurated a democratic policy that was to change the drift of American politics. Wilson's troublesome heredity, Mr. Baker shows, caused him to have extraordinary difficulties in the selection of his cabinet. He wanted men of worth and not political adherents. The congress before him as well as the country in general was astounded and intrigued at Wilson's honesty and bluntness. For the first time in over a hundred years he read himself before congress his first political suggestion.

Largely due to his almost irresistible personal appeal and his theory that a President should know intimately and personally the ruling bodies of the government, his associates in congress and in his cabinet were, though often hostile, completely captivated for nearly a year. And he succeeded in passing three important measures, the radical tariff reform, the reform of the national currency and the anti-trust laws.

Mr. Baker shows, however, that Wilson was losing ground with congress and the American people before war was declared. There was a growing feeling of resentment in the country toward his progressive and democratic policy and a reaction against his unequaled success with his first political measures. At the outbreak of the war the author sees Wilson primarily as a man exquisitely versed in the history and application of domestic policy, thrown into a foreign turmoil for which he was comparatively unprepared. It is interesting to guess, the author says, what would have happened to his forward looking ideals, to his reform of American politics if the war had not forced his attention away from his schemes. With this provocative idea, Mr. Baker closes the present volumes.

Attorney C. D. Fithian, who represents Daniel Gilday, reformer who shot a boy while drunk, denied yesterday that he was ever attorney for the Better Government association, of which Gilday was formerly an official, or that he had been retained to represent Gilday by the association, as was stated last Thursday in THE TRIBUNE. Gilday has been his client for some years, Mr. Fithian said.

THE STAGE

"PAYMENT DEFERRED," with Charles Laughton's remarkable acting, will end its engagement at the Harris theater next Saturday night, thus abbreviating its stay by one week. The next play to be offered at the Harris by the Dramatic League of Chicago—the fourth of its season—will be Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," which will open Dec. 21.

Mr. Laughton's company will disband. His next venture on the American stage may be a revival of a play called "Alibi," in which he had a London run. It is a comedy which gives him the role of a French detective.

Jan. 18 is the probable date for the Chicago premiere of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra," at the Blackstone theater. Beatrice Judith Anderson and Florence Reed, the cast will include Crane Wilbur and Walter Abel.

"Girl Crazy's" run at the Garrick theater ended last Saturday night. The next booking at that playhouse is "Rhapsody in Black," which is scheduled to begin an engagement on Sunday, Dec. 27. This is a revue by a company of colored entertainers, headed by Ethel Waters. It was popular in New York last season, and has frequently been announced for Chicago.

Billy Bryant's snow boat company will end its sojourn at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, and will promptly move to the Cort theater to continue the festivities of "Ten Nights in a Barroom." The next show at the Studebaker will be "Elizabeth the Queen," with Elisabeth Risdon in the role originated by Lynn Fontanne.

The premières for Christmas week in Chicago will be "Three's a Crowd," at the Erlanger; "The Wonder Bar," with Al Jolson, at the Apollo; "Broken Dishes," at the Adelphi; and "Strange Interlude," at the Blackstone. "Three's a Crowd" will open next Sunday. The others will wait until Christmas night.

Good Morning!

Swift and entertaining, but none too shrewd—that's "Blonde Crazy" for you.

Kubec Glasmon and John Bright, authors of "The Public Enemy" and "Smart Money," turned out this racketeering film, originally to be called "Larceny Lane," which is cut on much the same pattern as its predecessors. The story of this last is, however, far from being as real and meaty as those of the co-authors' first two money making films. Clever acting, unusually astute direction and good staging keep the piece vigorous and intriguing—but you don't believe half of it. Lines are pretty snappy.

The excellent cast is headlined by James Cagney, who rang the bell so resonantly in "The Public Enemy." Joan Blondell, who also appeared in that picture, is his partner in crime in this one.

Mr. Cagney portrays a small town bell hop with big city ambitions. Miss Blondell, a hostelry linen girl, is the blonde who sets him agog and agrees to assist him in lifting urban bank rolls, none too honestly got, from their owners. Ann is his pal—but never his mistress—and, when necessary, she says NO with a smack on the jaw.

Well, the pair of them have their adventures, one of same being a swell church wedding for Ann—which is one of the unbelievable episodes of the picture. They outsmart—and are outsmarted—but mostly the former. A rainbow hails bellhop on the heels of a likely deluge of trouble.

Mr. Cagney (he takes piano lessons and practices dutifully when not working) is expert, tough, boyish and rib tickling. Miss Blondell is, I thought, quite effective as a hard hussy with a good heart and a moral code that's all her own but not so bad at that.

I imagine that this tale of the two Irish babes who ventured into the New York woods to get themselves some heroics will have considerable box office appeal.

See you tomorrow.

Workers Getting Ready for the Christmas Fiesta

All day yesterday an army of workers filled the Coliseum with the din of preparation for the Christmas fiesta, under the sponsorship of the Showman's League of America, which will be opened to the public today. Far into the night the work went on, in preparation for the numerous attractions that will make up the Mardi Gras, and for the brief ceremony this evening when Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling is expected to push the button opening the two weeks of merriment.

The showmen's fund for disabled members is the principal beneficiary of the show. Other Chicago philanthropies, including the Hungry School Children's fund raised by the readers of this newspaper, will receive part of the admissions for the first three days.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

Most games may be divided into two classes. Golf, archery, trapshooting, and similar sports are to a great extent solitaire games. While one player may compete with another, his real battle is against the game itself. Tennis, squash, football, and baseball are purely competitive and the player's main object is to outwit his opponent.

One of the fascinations of contract bidding is that it partakes of the nature of both types of sports. At times a partnership has little competition. It is pitted against the game itself. Its object is simply to reach the most perfect declaration permitted by the combined [illegible] At other times there is strong competition between pairs as the necessity of overbidding the opponents arises and much risk becomes of utmost importance.

The bidding in yesterday's player-problem was of the highly competitive sort and victory depended not only on proper valuation but on the courage of the rival partnerships. The hands:

NORTH
♠—3,10,8,5,3
♥—3
♦—A,Q,10,3
♣—J,10,5
WEST	EAST
♠—5	♠—A,7
♥—J,7,6,3	♥—K,Q,10,8,5,2
♦—K,J,8,5,4	♦—7
♣—Q,7,5,2	♣—A,9,8,4
	SOUTH (Dealer)
	♠—K,Q,9,4,2
	♥—A,9
	♦—9,6,3,2
	♣—K,3

South dealt and opened the bidding with one spade. West passed. North held four supporting tricks gone for his long spade suit, 1½ for his singleton, and 1½ high card tricks in diamonds. Since it was only necessary to have 3 supporting tricks to raise his partner's one bid to two, he was able to raise the one bid to three with his 4 supporting tricks.

East had been impatiently waiting to talk about his strong heart hand and, holding 3 high card tricks and 9 probable tricks, he overcalled with four hearts. South promptly bid four spades. West now found that he held 3 supporting tricks for a heart bid. Though realizing that his partner's bid was defensive, he felt justified in giving a single raise, particularly as he was almost defenseless against the spade declaration, so he bid five hearts.

North, though having shown his full values, decided that he had enough presence. The first place his singleton had become a additional value in his eyes since it was on the opponent's suit. Moreover, he held the 7-10 of the trump suit which, though not counted as a supporting trick, was certainly of more value than two small. Further, he held the ♦ A-Q-10 and not simply the ♦ A-Q, and his ♣ 9-10 might be of some possible use. He therefore went to five spades, which closed the bidding.

West opened the ♥ 7. North played his singleton ♦. East the Q. South taking with the A. South returned the ♥ 2, which he trumped to his dummy with the ♠ 3. Dummy then led the ♣ J, which East took with the A. East returned the ♣ 4, South taking the trick with the K. South politely returned the ♣ 2, which East took with the A. East then led the ♣ 6. South trumped with the ♠ 4. South now led the ♣ 8, clearing the suit. To the eighth trick South led the ♦ 8, West played the 4, dummy the 7, and East the 7. A double finesse, of course, but necessary if game was to be made. South now led the ♦ 2. West played the 9, and South took with the 10. Dummy then led the ♣ 5, which South took with the Q and returned the ♦ 5, which was taken by dummy's Q. Dummy now cashed the ♦ A and the ♣ 10 for five odd and his contract.

Aid to Families Main Task of United Charities

Has 15 Relief Stations in Chicago Now.

The United Charities is essentially a family welfare agency in that its principal work is family service and relief, given in the homes. It handles no cases of single men other than to refer them to the proper agencies for relief. During the current year, in company with the Catholic charities, the Jewish charities, the Salvation Army and the American Red Cross, it is working in conjunction with the Joint Emergency Relief fund of Cook county.

A year ago the agency supervised ten relief stations throughout Chicago. Then the number was increased to 12 stations. This year the emergency relief in which unemployment was the only problem, has largely been transferred to stations opened by the Emergency Relief organization and supervised by the Red Cross. Despite this transfer the United Charities was able to lop off only three of its 12 stations in the city.

The stations retained are at 4631 Dante avenue, 437 West 63d street, 4500 Prairie avenue, 813 Gilpin place, 10256 Vincennes avenue, 2030 Milwaukee avenue, 1143 Houstin avenue, 2959 South Michigan avenue, 1959 Washington boulevard, 360 Locust street, 11135 North Marshfield avenue, 1154 Diversey boulevard, 4100 North Long avenue, 2113 West 23d street, and 734 West 47th street.

A huge map, soon to show the districts, hangs on the walls of the charity headquarters. By this map an applicant for charity, when he telephones for relief, is quickly referred to the relief station in the district in which he lives.

After application is made to one of the 15 stations immediate relief is given if necessary. After that a case worker visits the home and provides the added relief and the services necessary. At present there are 240 college trained women engaged in this work. Despite the high technical skill and knowledge needed in charity case work, and the training required before assignment to a district, the starting salary is only $100 a month. No horse is entered without the permission of those living there.

More of such horses are receiving charity relief this year than at any time during the last eleven years. The following table gives the case count for the United Charities for the years 1920 to 1930:

	Total relief.	Number of cases.
1920	$210,740.75	6,307
1921	219,888.32	11,600
1922	168,146.00	14,824
1923	208,716.61	11,000
1924	238,668.84	14,172
1925	248,411.00	15,000
1926	220,124.61	12,092
1927	210,254.00	14,635
1928	204,197.21	14,861
1930	320,000.84	20,642

The last two months of the year always shows the greatest number of charity applications. During 1931 each month has shown an increase, as well as a 400 per cent increase over the same month of 1930. The family count for November was almost twice that of January. The following table shows the increase over last year:

	1930.	1931.
January	9,873	16,000
February	9,886	16,878
March	9,981	17,000
April	9,990	16,838
May	9,600	16,000
June	9,627	14,700
July	9,617	15,624
August	9,700	16,440
September	9,000	16,840
October	9,870	16,800
November	7,000	20,841
December	13,007	.....

Although there was an actual increase of 8.7 per cent in cases during November despite the allocation of a large number of cases to the emergency relief stations opened by the joint relief fund and operated by the Red Cross, there was a decrease of 4.5 per cent in relief cost. This was balanced by an increase in the relief given by the Red Cross.

In addition to the amounts furnished from the joint relief fund, each of the social agencies has some income from other sources, which in normal times suffices to carry the charity load. In most cases this income is smaller this year, due to the decision not to conduct individual drives for funds.

During the first eleven months of 1931 the United Charities spent $2,523,148 on charity relief. Of that amount $580,566 was furnished from the regular income and gifts of the agency. The remainder was given from the joint fund.

Sixth Corps Chief of Staff Speaks Tomorrow

Col. W. H. Burt, chief of staff of the sixth corps area, will speak at a luncheon tomorrow at the Hotel Sherman of the Military Intelligence association and the Military Intelligence reserve officers of Chicago and vicinity. His subject will be "Command and Staff."

SEEK $20,000,000 FOR POOR RELIEF WITHIN COOK COUNTY

Reports yesterday from the headquarters of the Joint Emergency relief indicated that the various divisions of canvassers were pushing the total of subscriptions steadily closer to the ten million dollar quota set. Gifts added to the fund and announced yesterday amounted to $62,000, which brought the mark for the entire drive to $9,737,622.

Contingent upon the appeal to the legislature for an additional ten million of public funds to carry the county through the economic crisis and up to October of 1932, there thus remains a balance of only $262,377 to be collected by private subscription. Already emergency stations for family relief have been opened, and three more are in prospect to handle the approximately 25,000 needy families who are dependent on the fund.

Of the donations reported yesterday, the largest sum was from employes of the University of Chicago, who pledged $23,512. Pledges of $5,000 each reported both by the employes of the C. I. T. corporation and those of the Nygreen Food Products corporation. Employes of the General Food Sales company pledged $2,500, and individual pledges for the same sum were received from George E. Scott, John R. Thompson, and C. H. Storey.

Two thousand dollars was the amount designated by the employes of Edison and Bennett company; the Calumet Baking Powder company pledged $1,500, Grand Union Tea and employes, $1,150, and $1,000 each by the General Food Sales company, John Kraus, and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. King.

In an address on Saturday to members of the committees in charge of the revived charity ball on the eleven Dec. 18 at the Auditorium, Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the Joint Emergency relief, stated with pride that despite the emergency character of the relief that was being dispensed, against tremendous odds and in the face of much criticism of the administration of the fund, the overhead expenses for the stations already established had been held down to eight cents and one mill on every dollar.

"We do not feel," he added, "even though we still are struggling desperately to bring order out of chaos and get our machinery functioning smoothly, that we have to apologize for our record to date."

Free Lunches to Be Open at Holiday Time

Fund Will Provide Meals During Vacation.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 North Dearborn street, 1151 East 63d street, and 4130 West Madison street.

Destitute school children of Chicago will get their most appreciated Christmas gift through the medium of the penny lunchrooms, which are to remain open to serve them, all during the holiday vacation. Santa Claus may pass them by, the rest of the world may forget about them; but, at least, these youngsters will have the comfort of warm meals daily to bring a modicum of Christmas cheer into their lives.

Preparations to serve the needy boys and girls during the time the schools are closed have been made by Miss Frances L. Swain, head of the department of home economics for the board of education, and administrator of the Hungry School Children's fund. The move is more than a kindly gesture—it is a necessity to insure against physical suffering among these children, Miss Swain declared yesterday.

At present the funds collected from readers of this newspaper to provide these free, nourishing lunches are being expended at the rate of $2,500 a week. They are bringing to thousands of children in 113 city schools practically their only full meal of each day.

Superintendent William J. Bogan recently enlarged the advisory board assisting Miss Swain in the distribution of these funds, appointing four more women to the committee. Already these women have been helpful in the past. They are Miss Louella Chapin of the Chicago Women's Club; Mrs. Philip Schwartz, Chicago Women's Aid; Mrs. A. Richard Pardee, Cooperative Association for Jewish Charities, and Mrs. E. D. Pomeroy, Children's Scholarship league.

Those previously appointed are Mrs. E. B. Stephenson and Mrs. James Graham of the Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. C. F. Schwartz and Mrs. Samuel Lawlor of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education.

Contributions yesterday for the Hungry School Children's fund were:

$10—Bruce S. Mabie; Dr. W. S. Keyes.

$5—Barbara and Nancy Fox; Anonymous; E. W. G.

$2.50—Two Mercedarians.

$1.50—Mary Lou Lafayette Jones; Peters Machinery company; "Sandy"; J. C. Thomas.

$1—Anonymous; John Pershing Weiss; Martin Ted and Jack Weiss; Mrs. G. Brazda; Ruth Anderson; Marie Fraiser.

Total ..... $ 95.00
Previously acknowledged 37,897.92

Grand total $37,992.92

Donations to this fund should be accompanied by the coupon printed in an adjacent column and should be directed to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE at Tribune Tower.

University of Chicago Orchestra Will Give Symphony Concert

With the musical talent of the faculty, students and employes represented, the symphony orchestra of the University of Chicago will present its first concert on Tuesday night at Mandel hall on the campus. Carl Bricken, assistant professor in the new music department at the Midway institution, will direct the seventy-five pieces.

When the orchestra swings into its symphonic arrangements the public will hear the tinkle of the triangle, played by Thornton Wilder, novelist and visiting professor at the university; Lloyd Steere, vice president and business manager, will blow a French horn; Martin Schutze, a professor of Germanic languages, will play the first violin, while Leon P. Smith, an instructor in the French department, will perform on the flute.

Tuesday night's program will consist of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," Beethoven's "Coriolan," De Busay's "Petite Suite," and the "Finlandia" of Sibelius.

EXPERTS ON CONTRACT BRIDGE WILL RESUME THEIR BATTLE TONIGHT

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The battle of contract bridge systems, which had developed indications that a climax is in the making as to whether each side is using the system as required, will be resumed tomorrow night with Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby, 4,340 points ahead of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

In five rubbers Saturday night the Culbertsons won only two, yet reduced their point deficit by 810, mainly by a series of doubles and redoubles which sometimes were costly to them. Lenz and Jacoby now have won 20 rubbers to 13 for the Culbertsons.

One Woman Discovers Health, Better Looks Via the Water Cure

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Just to prove that water drinking has beauty value, let me reveal this paragraph from a letter before me:

"Last summer," J. S. writes, "another woman in the office and I decided to drink water. We had sort of a pact: 'You drink a glass and I will.' We managed to consume about eight glasses a day. We set out with the enthusiasm of trying a glass an hour, but found we were too busy for that many visits to the cooler. But we did get in our eight a day, pretty regularly.

"Now, I had been operated on for hemorrhoids once and for years have been a victim of constipation troubles. And I'm willing to admit publicly and privately that the water drinking did the trick for me. But that isn't all. The improvement in my hair is so marked you wouldn't believe it unless you knew me before and after my experiment. Only there isn't an afterpret. I still drink—water. My hair is a better color, if you'd believe it. It has some body to it and a noticeable look of health formerly sadly lacking.

"And eyes that isn't all. My complexion looks better than it has looked in years. Gosh—and all the water I've let flow under the bridge, these years, without stopping a glass of it! Aren't we women nutty, though, spending all the money we do on outside hair and complexion cures and neglecting the inside ones completely?"

The doctors—medic and beauty—can advise year in and year out about the value of water drinking without making much of a dent on their respective audiences. But when a bona-fide correspondent in her bona-fide letter gives a first hand report on what water can do for the complexion, hair and internal cleanliness, I know the audiences will be more interested.

But I don't approve of over-enthusiasm concerning even so good a thing as water. Eight glasses a day is enough. Even six will do for the average person. Take them either at end of a meal or between meals.

Embroidery Restored to Paris Fashions

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The embroidered frock for daytime has not been seen in Paris for long seasons, but it reappears this winter, having been reinstated in fashion's good graces by Jean Patou. Patou's frocks with vestees and plastrons of Persian embroidery are being worn around the town by some of the smartest women in the style capital.

One of Patou's Persian embroidered frocks is shown in today's sketch. It is made of bright Persian green crepe marocain with a set on plastron and a standing collar of gold, red and green Persian embroidery. The skirt of this frock looks very slender in spite of the fact that there are clusters of knife plaits set in all round. Skirts must look slender to be chic this season, but like the pictured one they can be actually very wide, if their fullness is kept hidden.

With this frock goes the Patou coat shown in the background, a coat of Patou's tropical brown in broadcloth, with a standing collar, cuffs and hem of brown astrakhan. This coat, like all fashionable wraps this winter, is firmly closed, being tied on at the left side of the waistline by broadcloth ties and the fur collar being buttoned up on the right shoulder.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Recently I took my little girl, Mavis, 3½ years, to see the river which is extremely high just now, due to recent rains. The water was flowing rapidly, and at first sight of it she exclaimed: "O, look daddy! The water's going home, isn't it?" W. C. R.

Daughter Is Blamed for Remaining Loyal to Jobless Fiance

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Here's a girl "terribly in love" with a boy two years older. They've had two years of constant companionship to prove their love. The boy has had only a couple of years at high school, but studies every minute he has to spare. He attends night classes. He had to leave school to work and advertising is his goal.

Recently he lost his job and is having difficulty landing another. He was simply let out along with others because of the depression.

Together these two decided to save money when they first found themselves in love. The girl says she'd be willing to marry him though he were penniless. She has that much faith in him. She knows he will do better than the average professional man.

Mother enters, however, with her objections. Since the boy's job evaporated into depression air, mother nags the girl to stop seeing him. She says he'll never make good when he can't find a job and that the girl could do better. Etcetera—you know the sort of thing such a mother would say.

To the credit of most mothers, they are not only aware of the current condition, but sympathetic with the victims of the unemployment situation. There are some, however, who refuse to compromise with facts. They're intolerant, impatient and not very bright women. Some of them are leveling their guns hourly at husbands or sons whose unfortunate plight is to have to be around the house, day after day. When faith is most needed, it fails.

Where the breadwinner is concerned one can, perhaps, understand the women described. Their security is threatened. Their comfort disturbed. But where a daughter's future is concerned, it's something else. That's outside mother's personal security. It becomes meddlesomeness. And in this case it is destructive meddling.

Instead of condemning the girl for showing her strength in the face of adversity, there should be approval. Right here is where the right kind of parent would recognize an excellent bit of training for her daughter. Training for possible bad weather matrimonial days. Encouraging a girl to up and run away from a crucial situation in her love life is encouraging excellent divorce material later. Give those loyal little girls a great big hand you parents! Don't try to warp their matrimonial characters now in the making.

Food Talk

Quite a number of women have trouble unmolding foods. There is no point in molding foods if the shape is spoiled, so it is important to take every precaution.

When the food is placed in a greased mold, be sure to grease the mold heavily. An unsalted fat is preferable, but if a salted one is used, such as butter or butter substitute, it will do as well if the fire is not allowed to get too hot. Be careful to cover the entire surface of the pan and grease it up to and including the edge. When the food is cooked, remove from the oven and loosen it in the mold—with your fingers, if it is cool enough, or gently with a knife.

Then—and this is where lots of people make a mistake—instead of trying to turn the mold out onto the platter, invert the platter over the mold. Hold the two receptacles firmly together and turn them over. If the food does not unmold at once, tap the mold with a knife handle.

When the mold is not greased, in the case of gelatin desserts and salads, run warm—not hot—water over the outside of the mold to loosen it. In the case of individual forms the best thing to do is to cover the bottom with your hand and transfer it that way to the plate. If your gelatin is properly set, it will be hard enough so that this will not affect the shape.

In the case of a large mold invert it on a plate before you pour the water over it. Never use hot water. This melts the gelatin and ruins the shape of the mold.

If you are planning to have the food appear in a design in the finished mold, remember that you will have to put in whatever goes on top first, and so on. Wait until the gelatin has begun to thicken before you pour it in, because if you do not the solid bits that are to form your design will float out of place.

When the mold contains such things as chopped nuts, be sure that they do not protrude from the gelatin in the mold. If they do they will prevent the mold from standing perfectly straight when it is turned out. And, incidentally, do not make gelatin molds containing nuts too long before they are to be used. The gelatin makes the nuts soggy.

The Bride's Boat

By Coralie Stanton and Heath Hosken

SYNOPSIS.

Eli Lenore, who had wirted four years in a London family hotel, accepts a post as the grand Afrika hotel, Sordwest, Kenya. Theo Sable had gone there two years before when Eli had broken her engagement to him. But Eli still wanted him more than anything in the world. She sails on the "Bride's Boat." Jon North, her cabin mate, is going out to be married. Lal Crawford, the biggest landowner about Sordwest, and a most attractive bachelor, is on the boat. He is attractive to Eli. Jon tells Eli the awful she learns about "the widow who owns him." Sordwest proves to be a sandlee with many tropical and terrible powers of demoralization to weak natures. Jon is married on her arrival to Noel Graham, who manages Greyhurst's coffee plantations. Eli knows that Theo has taken up his abode somewhere down the coast, in the town of "Green Fields." She meets the widow, Ariel Grieve, who lives nearby. Then Theo's bride arrives in Sordwest, with a heading party. They are both overjoyed to have found each other again. But there are unmistakable changes in Theo that Eli can't understand.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

A DREAM REALIZED.

Eli was all tenderness, all longing to comfort him. Theo looked such a boy, so beautiful, so winning. But, looking at him in the strong light of day, she was smitten again by his emaciated face. The brown skin was almost transparent; the cheek bones stood out like knobs; the blue eyes burned as with fever.

"Dearest Theo, you don't look a bit well!" she said.

"I'll be all right now I've found you, London Angel," he answered. "Now everything is O. K. You and I are going to be married, aren't we?" He got up and came to her chair and pulled her into the room, and held her close and kissed her with the old boyish tenderness. Gay, gallant, [illegible] kisses they were! Whatever of secrecy he had garnered since they had parted was swept away for the moment. He was the young lover, the woman, the convinced conqueror of a woman's heart. "We're going to be married as soon as ever I can make things right."

His response was a silent embrace, solemn with sincerity.

"Yes." Almost unconsciously she was overcome by her memories and the portrait of him that she had carried through the years, and she poured out her heart and confessed that she had come out to Africa to find him.

His response was the most perfect a woman could have asked for, a passionate, silent embrace, solemn with sincerity.

"My more than angel, how can I ever love you enough?"

"It was Fate, wasn't it?" she asked, breathless.

"Indeed it was! And now I must get to work, darling. I must go and dig gold somewhere, so that we can be happy."

It was vague again. As she looked at him she was met with veiled eyes. He never gone out of them, puzzle and worry taking its place. She hazarded a straight question.

"Theo, who is looking after your place—the house and farm? It looked such a lovely place from the pictures you showed me."

"Nobody is looking after it," he said. "At least, not for me. I had to sell it."

"O, how you must have hated that!"

"It was pretty bad, but it had to be done."

"Your mother lost money, I suppose?" Recollections of their old talks came back to her. "Then, I suppose it was the old story—your mother never would allow you to do anything, would she? She did everything herself, and you never had a chance."

"It wasn't exactly that, Kit, darling. But—yes, in a way you are right. But my mother was a wonderful woman. She only wanted to do the best for me."

"I know." Still, her opinion was confirmed. It was Mrs. Sable who had parted them.

He turned to her, smiling infectiously.

"But we mustn't allow anything to worry us, darling! Here you are and here I am. And that's that. Let's be perfectly happy!"

But it seemed that she always had to ask questions.

"Are you going to stay here, Theo?"

"As if I could go! What do you take me for? For three years I've dreamed of you every night. A lion roaring or a spider crawling over my face—whatever woke me up, I could have done murder, because in my dreams you were there."

She smiled. It was so fascinating.

"Did you see the Nightlands?" she asked.

"Yes. I arrived the night before last and went straight to the palace of a place where they were staying with this millionaire blighter who owns most of the colony. Funnily enough, I've never come up against him before, although, of course, I've heard all the thousand and one tales about him. The first thing I heard was that they were off yesterday morning. I settled up with Lord Nightland, and I was put up in a corner of the palace, and the rest of the day I spent going over the kit and equipment, etc., so that it can be sent to Nairobi to be put into storage until the Nightlands come out again. And when that was done, I shed the dust of the palace from my feet—I don't think I was at all welcome there—and I came along here to get a chatsedown, and found you!" The sunny, boyish smile flashed out. "And after that the old world began to spin round properly again, and it's still doing it! It was going the wrong way round before—for the last three years, to be correct."

Kit smiled. He was irresistible. And yet it was not altogether what she had thought and dreamed of. He was here. He was dear—more so, indeed, than he had ever been. It was the same impassioned youth, the same glamorous charm. Only, she felt the same incomprehensible depression as last night, the same vague uncertainty, like a small cold hand touching her heart.

"We're going to have a great time, darling," he announced. "And we're going to be married as soon as it can possibly be done. Is that all right?

"All I've got to do is to make a bit of money to buy some land, and we can settle down. I think it must be coffee and maize and sisal this time, sweetheart! Cows and pigs and chickens are deadly dull."

She said coffee would be thrilling. She loved the plantations she had seen, so rich looking, luxuriant, and neat, with the rows of palms planted all around, and so lovely when the coffee trees were in flower, and so amusing the way they put thatched covers over to shade them.

But she could not understand it, all the same, and realised that she was talking for the sake of talking. Surely, as he was such a wonderful white hunter, he must be well paid? She did not care whether he had money or not, but it was so queer. He couldn't have lost everything. His mother was really well off. She wouldn't have noticed it but that he harped so on the fact that he must make money. He couldn't afford to marry her straight off; that was evident.

She did not mind that. She was quite happy as she was. Now that she had found Theo, and he was the same, everything was right.

They went downstairs together, and again Theo sprung a surprise on her by asking her to cash him a check for a hundred pounds. She couldn't manage it and told him she would have to get it from the bank. He signed the check and left it with her. She saw that it was made out by Lord Nightland. That, again, was queer. She knew how high the rates of pay are in Africa, and it seemed very little for Theo's services on a safari that had lasted nearly two months.

It was just at dinner time when Kit came down to her office again. The hotel was emptying, and she began to find that she had not really much to do, so she looked for odd jobs, and the housekeeper was grateful for her help in going through the linen and making out lists of what had to be replaced.

She was not expected to wear an office uniform of any kind, and she had put on a frock of ivory crêpe de chine, with some delicate lace at the throat, that lent her clear amber skin a look of enchantment. A bunch of pale green velvet roses on her shoulder caught the green in her eyes, and they sparkled like a turquoise summer sea. She had been quite pleased with herself while dressing. It was one of her nights. How nice, because this was here!

Antiquarian Society Meets on December 22

THE Antiquarian society of the Art institute has issued invitations for its annual reception, and although the date is Dec. 22 and every one will be busier than the proverbial bee at that time, we will wager every one who is invited will be there, for it promises to be one of the most interesting of the many interesting parties the Antiquarians have had.

The reception will be held from 2:30 until 5 o'clock in the galleries where Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett's loan exhibition of Swedish wall hangings will be opened that day. These hangings were collected by Miss Bartlett in Sweden last summer and every one who has seen them says they are most original and naïve and intensely interesting. The most recent bulletin of the Art institute contains a long article about them and, according to it, they are "one of the most interesting examples of national art expression, entirely unhampered by any outside influence."

"These 'bonader' were produced for a definite purpose, to decorate the walls and ceilings of peasant homes on festal occasions.

"The painters, though unsophisticated, were real artists, possessed of unusual imagination, equipped with an amazing knowledge of the Scriptures, and endowed with sufficient ingenuity to clothe religious compositions with the dress of their patrons and to use contemporary Scandinavian surroundings for settings. Their drawing is both bold and full of mannerisms, and while the colors used were limited to tones of red, blue, green, yellow, and a vigorous use of black, they are rich and of varied intensity."

There is much more descriptive matter and two illustrations in the bulletin, and another reproduction which we have seen (more of that one later), which make us very anxious to see these fascinating "bonader."

Mrs. Potter Palmer, president of the Antiquarians, will be assisted in receiving by the directors—Miss Bartlett, Mrs. Walter Borden, Mrs. E. Harris Brewer, Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. C. Phillip Miller, and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson. Mrs. Goodspeed is in charge of the tea table, which will be decorated in Swedish style, and, like everything else to which the charming Mrs. Goodspeed puts her artistic hand, it will be a work of art, we are sure. There will be music during the afternoon, too.

The other reproduction of a Swedish wall hanging which we have seen, this one in colors, is the one Miss Bartlett used to ornament the invitations she sent out for a Swedish festival she is giving this afternoon for her nephew's bride, Mrs. Frederic Clay Bartlett Jr. Miss Bartlett has arranged a surprise program for the affair, which is to be held at 2 o'clock at the Casino, and from the little we have been able to find out about it, we are sure it is to be an unusual and amusing party. Mrs. Walter Borden, Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, Miss Constance Hasler, Mrs. Raymond E. Durham, and the Countess Cardelli will assist.

Mrs. William B. Johnson of 202 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston, is giving a debutantes' luncheon today for Miss Myra Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Little, who made her debut on Sept. 19.

Mrs. John Edward Wells of 421 Barry avenue will give a luncheon at the Woman's Athletic club on Tuesday, Dec. 29, for her daughter, Margaret, who is a senior at Vassar, and five debutantes of the season, Miss Alice May Dickinson, Miss Jane Valentine, Miss Eleanor Jerrems, Miss Dorothy Dewes, and Miss Anne Byron Smith.

Most of the box hostesses at the charity ball have their parties planned and it is quite safe to predict that every club and hotel popular with fashionable folk will have numerous dinner parties preceding that ball Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer will have their son-in-law and daughter, the Oakleigh Thorne Lewises; Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, and Robert Allerton and his adopted son, John Gregg, with them. Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine will be hostess to Mr. and Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Elisha let W. Cramer, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, and Bernard F. Rogers. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bradley will be the guests of Mrs. Joseph B. Long and Dr. and Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum. Mrs. Walter Borden has invited her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson; Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, and Edwin Winter to be her guests. Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick will be hostess to Miss Harriet Stuart, Mrs. Nevins Johnson, Augustus S. Peabody, Rockefeller Prentice, and Edwin Kreun.

The Henry Fields, Prince Nicholas Galitsine, Talbot Wegg, Joseph C. Belden Jr., and their granddaughter, Miss Joan Williams, will be with Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull will have with them Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Erskine. Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson, and Deering Davis will be with Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney. To list them all would take up much more space than we have, but judging by the few printed above, you may know that every one not confined to his or her home by illness Friday night will be at the old Auditorium.

The Princeton boys who are in the cast of "Spanish Blades," the Triangle club show to be given at the Studebaker theater the afternoon and evening of Dec. 26, are to be royally entertained during their brief stay here. They have been invited to the ball the Walter Ayers are giving on Christmas night at the Blackstone to introduce their daughter, Janet, and after the performance Saturday night they will attend the ball the Charles E. Browns, the L. Newton Perrys, and Mrs. Robert H. McCormick will give for Miss Betty Brown, Miss Polly Perry, and Miss Patty McCormick.

Before the performance a dinner will be given by Mr. and Mrs. William Saunders Elliott, who will entertain at the 900 for Miss Alice May Dickinson. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond E. Durham and Miss Betty Durham also will have a dinner, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe will entertain at the Casino for Miss Betty Brown. Miss Margaret Chapman, and Miss Anne Byron Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Smith also will give a dinner that night.

Three members of the Triangle club are Chicagoans, Hugh L. McWilliams Jr., Seymour Morris, and Montgomery M. Orr, all members of the class of '33. Mr. McWilliams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McWilliams, who are spending the winter in San Antonio; Mr. Morris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Thomas Morris of Winnetka, and Mr. Orr is the son Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Orr of St. Charles. The net proceeds of the Chicago performances will go to the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

The following day, Sunday, Dec. 27, Chicago will be host to the Harvard Instrumental clubs.

The Harvard club will give a luncheon for the boys on Monday at the H. Y. P. club. On Monday evening the Glee club performance will be repeated in Winnetka, and during the afternoon the boys will attend a tea dance that a group of Winnetka women are planning to give at Indian Hill. The hostesses will include Mrs. Lawrence Howe, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Albert C. Koch, Mrs. Raymond Durham, Mrs. F. Goddard Cheney, Mrs. Arthur G. Cable, Mrs. Everett L. Millard, Mrs. Phillip Wyatt Moore, and Mrs. F. Frank Daumann.

Mrs. William McCormick Blair arrived at home yesterday from having taken her son, William McCormick Jr., to the Evans school at Tucson, Ariz. Billy spends the fall and spring months at an eastern school but goes to the ranch school in Arizona each winter. Edward and Bowen Blair will return to Chicago from school in the east for the Christmas holidays, but Billy will not join the family for Christmas, as his vacation is not long enough to give him time to come and go such a distance.

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick leaves for a week's visit in Boston today. Mr. McCormick's sister and niece, Mrs. Marshall Fabyan and Miss Anna Fabyan, will come from Boston a few days after Christmas for a short visit with the McCormicks.

Carols Are as Vital a Part of Christmas as Is the Decorated Tree

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Can you think of Christmas without the singing of Christmas carols? They are as much a part of Christmas as holly, or a tree.

The nice thing about carols is that they are all so simple any child can sing them, yet so beautiful they satisfy the most mature and cultivated taste. Somehow do manage to have carols sung in your family before Christmas and on Christmas day.

This is one more part of the lovely spirit of Christmas that is not dependent upon money, for carols are everywhere. Some of them are in hymn books. If you haven't a hymn book, or access to one, ten or twelve cents will buy you any one of a dozen collections of the beautiful familiar carols, printed in festive manner with simple piano accompaniment. Schirmer and Ditson and other music publishers carry them.

In going over a mass of Christmas songs, the other day, in a music store I came across one of the nicest things, and bought it myself. It is called "Christmas Carols Made Easy to Play or Sing," by Mary Bacon Mason. It is published by Oliver Ditson, 113 West 57th street, New York City, and costs 75 cents, including postage. The pages are broad and the text printed large and widely spaced. But what I like best about it, in addition to the simpleness of the musical arrangement, is the fact that it contains almost all the beautiful old carols.

There are thirty-four in all—and not one could be spared. This would be a book to keep from year to year.

Here Is a Real Boy Wonder in Violin Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

That amazing youngster, Ruggiero Ricci, who fiddles like a young elsewhere at an age when most boys have never drawn a bow across the strings, gave a full sized adult recital at Orchestra hall yesterday. The program included the Bach Partita in E (for which Bach did not write a piano accompaniment but Fritz Kreisler did); the Goldmark Concerto, and dozen of smaller numbers that frequently find their way into the programs of virtuosi.

One's jaw has a tendency to drop when listening to this boy. Child wonders, or what are called so, are not so infrequent, but here is one well on the way to being a great musician. It is true that if he goes on his course for the next twenty years he may play the Bach Partita differently; he may even dislike the Goldmark Concerto altogether. As it is, he plays them youthfully but not childishly. He has an astounding command of the technic of his instrument, his sense of pitch is accurate to a high degree, he feels rhythm and transmits it, and he has an entirely legitimate if not entirely grownup feeling for musical values.

They say he is eleven years old. He hardly looks that. But he arouses an ambition to be present when he plays ten years from now.

One of the most agreeable song recitals of the season was given by Louise Bernhardt at the Civic theater yesterday afternoon. She is one of the younger members of the Civic Opera company, a prize winner in some important contests of the last two years, and an artist who has begun to fulfill unusual promise. It is not the least of her artistic assets that she decorates the stage with her presence, for no singer was ever harmed thereby. In addition she is the possessor of an uncommonly good mezzo-soprano voice, radiant and brilliant and apparently under expert control. She sang songs of various schools and languages, restraining herself in spite of her present employment from operatic excerpts except one. That was an aria from Gluck's "Iphigenia en Aulide," and she sang it in an excellent dramatic manner, as well done as the lyric phase of some of her later songs.

The Russian Symphonic choir, a costumed group of seventeen members, came back to the Studebaker yesterday to sing under the direction of Basile Kibalchich. Most Russian choruses have a number of things in common, of which the most striking is their uniform excellence. They have at least one bass who goes down to incredible depths, they have a remarkable sense of balance and flexibility, and they find a répertoire that it would pay all choruses from further west to study diligently. This chorus even goes further. In addition to ensemble singing, it can on occasion become an accompanying body, imitating an orchestral accompaniment for a solo—the "Song of India" as done by Michel Dedovich in this case—with a response from the audience that makes it difficult for the program to continue.

Another newcomer of uncommon talent appeared at the Playhouse in the person of Bomar Cramer, pianist. He has hands and a brain, and they are working at high efficiency. Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, and Chopin, honored standbys, made up the most of his program, but at the end he added a group of little heard contemporary music. In what of this could be heard he displayed unusual ability. In fact, any one who can play the Brahms Intermezzos and Capriccios, two of each, which to the casual observer are the least interesting of all that Brahms wrote and make them sound as well as Mr. Cramer did has something beyond ordinary talent.

Bears—Centro Lenzie [Chicago], Umpire—C. A. Brown [Indiana]. Head Linesman—W. E. Smith, De Pauw].

Benny Friedman's Giants from New York, twice defeated this season by the Bears, yesterday climaxed the professional football year by whipping those same Bears, 25 to 6, at Wrigley field. Eight thousand, a surprisingly large crowd in view of the weather, watched Friedman and the Giants.

Although the Bears stopped the Giants' offensive in the first period, it was evident even then that New York was the better team. In the second period the Giants reached the Bears' goal line and with Moran's point after the score, led the Chicagoans, 7 to 0, at the intermission.

Then the Giants unleashed an attack which had the Bears on the run in the third quarter. Johnny Kitzmiller, Oregon Dutchman, showed the Bears some fancy stepping in spite of the mud, and the two touchdown drive in the third quarter centered around his playing.

Wing Backs Fool Bears.

Although badly whipped the Bears came back with a drive which was concluded on the second play of the final quarter, when Dick Nesbitt stabbed through the Giant line for the Bears' only score. In the final 15 minutes of play a forward pass from a place kick formation on the Bears' 7 yard line, gave the Giants a fourth and final touchdown.

The Giants' power from their wing back formation forced the Bears to use a seven man line all afternoon, and the four man secondary defense was hard pressed to stop Friedman's forward passes. Benny didn't throw all the passes, for he retired from the competition after the first half, but the afternoon's labor showed the Giants had completed 14 forward passes out of 19 attempted, and these passes were good for 175 yards. Four New York passes were incomplete and one was intercepted.

Benny Thwarts Threat.

Only in the last quarter, when Dan Hurry had substituted at tackle for the Bears, despite an injured leg, did the Bears rally sufficiently to outplay the Giants and crash through for a touchdown.

Twice halted in Bear territory, the Giants finally negotiated a touchdown in the second period. Moran punted from midfield to the Bears' one yard line in the corner of the gridiron and Nesbitt booted the ball from behind his goal line to his own 27 yard strip. From there Friedman passed to Feather, who was downed on the Bears' 12 yard line. A lateral pass from Friedman to Sid Cagle carried the ball to the Bears' 8 yard stripe. Cagle was injured, and Kitzmiller, who replaced him, drove through the line on his second attempt for the touchdown.

Kitzmiller Is Star.

Kitzmiller was the big shot in the Giants' third period offensive. He returned a punt by Nesbitt 44 yards to the Bears' 25 yard line. Four plays by Reese, Kitzmiller and Burnett were good for 16 yards, and on third down Kitzmiller cut through left tackle for a touchdown.

After the subsequent kickoff Campbell recovered Keith Molesworth's fumble on Chicago's 29 yard line. On fourth down when three plays had been held to a yard gain, Moran passed to Burnett, who was tumbled by the Bears' 9 yard line. Murry was stopped and the Bears lost five yards. Then Sedbrook drove over on second down for another score and the Giants led, 19 to 6.

Nesbitt's Error Costly.

The Bears rallied immediately. Hinkeugh's return of the kickoff, a brilliant run, brought the ball to the Bears' 35 yard strip. Nesbitt, in a spirit of stabs at the line, carried to midfield. Then Nesbitt passed to Luke Johnson on the Giants' 15 yard line. Nesbitt and Molesworth made it first down in four tries and Nesbitt added 7 yards on the next play as the quarter ended.

On the first play of the last period, Nesbitt cracked the line, running unchecked into the end zone. Buckler's place kick failed for the point.

As exchange of punts following the next kickoff, saw the Giants start their offense from their own 44 yard line. Five plays put the ball on the Bears' 7 yard line. On the final attempt from a place kick formation, Feather passed to Burnett for the touchdown, Nesbitt rushing the kicker and failing to cover his territory.

Council Plans to Cure Badger Athletic Ills

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 13.—The athletic council of the University of Wisconsin now is formulating a reorganization of intercollegiate and intramural programs. Undoubtedly the council has asked for and will receive from George Little, director of athletics, further proposals for changes in personnel and reduction of expenditures.

The athletic council, which is composed of ten men—six faculty members, three alumni and one student—has announced that Wisconsin next year must stay within an expenditure of $100,000 plus a $20,000 payment on the field house and a $20,000 contingent fund. This is for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1932.

The average alumnus and layman, probably had not thought of changes other than in personnel. That is why most news items emanating from Madison have dealt exclusively with the coaching staff. That is why for two years the question of retention of Glenn Thistlethwaite, head football coach, has headlined the sports news.

Reorganize Finances First.

Changes in personnel may be made. But they will be announced only after the financial reorganization has been completed. Both programs will be made public when the complete details have been submitted to the Wisconsin faculty and then have been forwarded to the board of regents of the university with the recommendations of President Glenn Frank.

The next regular meeting of the board of regents is Jan. 20. In an interview yesterday President Frank indicated that unless a special meeting is held, the regents, final authority for all university matters, will be given all data on the situation at that time. President Frank, of course, is responsible to the regents. Obviously he considers the athletic problem of major importance, for he met with the athletic council during its recent sessions for the first time since he took office.

Coach Question Still in Air.

The regents [15 in number] are appointed by the governor. Each serves for six years. One is appointed from each of Wisconsin's eleven congressional districts and four are appointed at large. John Callahan, state superintendent of public instruction, an elected officer, and President Frank, are members ex-officio of this board.

The question of reduction of expenditures is a settled policy and al-

COX FIVE UP ON VON ELM, THEN RAIN STOPS 'EM

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Whitty Cox, Brooklyn professional, was 5 up on George Von Elm, Los Angeles, at the half way mark of their 36 hole final match of the $7,500 national match play open golf championship, today when it was postponed because torrential rains had turned the Lake Merced course into a puddle covered layout.

The second 18 holes will be played tomorrow afternoon, weather permitting.

Cox and Von Elm began their 36 hole duel in a sweeping rain. The downpour continued throughout the match while a scant hatful of spectators took a soaking along with the contestants.

Cox proved a better bad weather competitor than his stocky blond opponent and turned in a 74, two over par, for the course. Von Elm had an approximate 80. He picked up on the 11th after his ball was buried in the green so deeply it was barely visible. Billy Burke, national open champion, who refereed the match, gave Von Elm a 6 on this hole, Cox having won it with a 5. The cards:

SING SING ENDS SEASON IN MUD WITH 26 TO 0 WIN

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 13.—[Special.]—In a driving rain and on a muddy field Sing Sing's football team won its final game of the season today from the White Plains Steamrollers, 26 to 0. Only about half the prisoners braved the downpour to watch the contest, but 231 spectators from outside the walls sat through the storm.

Meehan Quits as Coach at New York U.

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—John F. [Chick] Meehan, head football coach at New York university for the last seven years, announced his resignation today.

In a formal, if somewhat vague, statement, Meehan said he desired that "no consideration be given to the renewal" of his contract. He added that he had made no coaching plans for 1932.

Chancellor Elmer E. Brown of New York university, to whom Meehan presented his resignation, had no comment to make tonight. He said the university probably would make an official statement later in the week.

Meehan indicated in his statement that the university had made no offer to renew his contract, understood to call for an annual salary of $12,000. Recent reports intimated he would be asked to sign a one year contract at a reduced salary.

Whether or not the recent attack on Meehan published by the New York University Daily News, a student paper, had anything to do with the coach's decision was a moot point.

The university paper several days ago asked the board of athletic control not to renew Meehan's contract.

SUMMERFELT OF CHICAGO ELECTED ARMY CAPTAIN

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Milton F. Summerfelt of Chicago, left guard, today was elected captain of the 1932 Army football team.

Summerfelt, a regular all this season, was one of the bulwarks of the strong Army line. He played the full 60 minutes against Notre Dame, and about 52 minutes against Navy yesterday.

At high school in Benton Harbor, Mich., Summerfelt won three letters in football. He attended Northwestern university for one year, winning numerals on the freshman football team. At West Point in his plebe year he was on the football, boxing and lacrosse squads, winning numerals in football and in crosse.

Clinic Examination Shows Hunk Anderson Is O. K.

PITT TRAVELERS MEET WISCONSIN FIVE TOMORROW

And Then Purdue and Indiana.

The ten young men who joined the University of Pittsburgh basketball squad to see the world will play three Big Ten teams this week on the first leg of a transcontinental journey that will take them to Los Angeles by Dec. 30.

Pittsburgh, which last year won 20 of 24 games, is out to establish a claim to the national championship. The obstacles the team will meet in the Western conference are Wisconsin, Indiana and Purdue, which they plan to meet and beat in four days, starting with the Badgers at Madison tomorrow night.

Badgers May Wreck Room.

This is a sizable assignment for any basketball team, even one which is known as the Panthers. It would not be surprising if the "Pitt for champion" boom collapses suddenly at Madison. If not, Indiana on Wednesday and Purdue on Friday will see what they can do about it.

Pittsburgh already has captured the national endurance record for statisticians. The Pitt representative has been marking down baskets and free throws since 1905, and will give you figures to show the Panthers have made 13,342 points in that time, while their opponents dropped in a paltry 11,382.

Pitt has won 267 games and lost 139. Wisconsin and Butler, which the easterners meet Saturday at Indianapolis, are among the seven opponents (out of a list of 64), that Pittsburgh has failed to beat. Each won the only game played with the travelers.

Trojans Meet Butler.

Southern California's wandering basketball team, which lost to Creighton, DePaul and Northwestern last week, will try its luck against Butler tonight, and then will start home, pausing for three games in Missouri. The Utah team, Brigham Young, which has been victimized by Wisconsin and Loyola, will meet Marquette at Milwaukee this evening.

The unhappy lot of these visitors might serve as a warning to Dr. Red Carlson, Pittsburgh coach, but at a late hour last night his slogan still was, "We'll win 'em all."

Here's a Real Game.

The feature game of the week between teams of the central states is expected at South Bend tomorrow, when Purdue plays Notre Dame. The Boilermakers, with Wooden, Keller, and Stewart flipping field goals from here and there, have ideas about the Big Ten title. Notre Dame, if Johnny Baldwin is able to play, hopes to show more stuff than was evidenced during its defeat by Indiana Saturday.

In addition to Purdue and Indiana, at least four teams have indicated they will dispute Northwestern's effort to win its second straight Big Ten title. They are Illinois, Ohio State, Minnesota and Michigan. Wisconsin is a possibility.

Pickles from the Camps.

Feverish bulletins from these camps, and others, yesterday said:

Northwestern: Let 'em try to beat us. Capt. McCarnes will be back at center before the Big Ten schedule opens. Meanwhile, we play Washington university of St. Louis Saturday night.

Illinois: Miami U. is next, Friday night. Four veterans have returned of the team that finished last season in a blaze of seven straight victories. And Huddle Hellmich, sophomore center, is a big toe.

Michigan: Look at our defense! Held Michigan State to one basket and five points. It looks just too bad for Mount Union Saturday night at Ann Arbor.

Ohio State: Probably the tallest team in the conference. Conrad, Bishop, and Hooker are 6 feet 4. Average of squad over 6 feet. Next game with Tufts at Columbus Dec. 23.

Wisconsin: Another tight defense, with Pease and Nelson, centers, as the chief defenders. Swiss, a new forward, has started out well. Pittsburgh tomorrow night and that musical bat-

"Watch Yer Car?" Signal to Call Cop

BY HAL FOUST.

Capt. Daniel A. Lynch of the Warren police district last night appealed for public cooperation in a campaign to rid the vicinity of the Chicago Stadium of the hoodlums who intimidate motorists for tips to "watchyercar."

"If automobile drivers will refuse to tip and will call a policeman when they are solicited by these watchers," said the captain, "we can break up this racket. But we need this public cooperation."

The police campaign was initiated rather inauspiciously. The management of the Blackhawks, with the house full of customers for the hockey match with Boston, indicated little interest in whether the patrons' automobiles were stolen, refusing Capt. Lynch the privilege of using the stadium offices for a conference on the parking problem.

"Nine out of ten of these so-called watchers," said the captain, in an interview outside the stadium, "are hoodlums or juvenile delinquents, and the motorists pay them for the use of public curb space for fear of getting tires punctured.

"There have been a number of cars stolen around the stadium. Frank Harmon, son of the late Paddy Harmon, lost his car not long ago. I have a strong suspicion that some of these hoodlum watchers are auto thieves.

"I have seven policemen detailed to watch the cars parked around the stadium. There is always one nearby for a motorist to call when some tough asks to guard his car. I've ordered the arrest of the hoodlum watchers and will prosecute them for disorderly conduct."

The stadium has its own parking lot, fenced and well policed, but the charge of 50 cents is higher than many care to pay when there is plenty of curb space on nearby sidestreets.

RANGERS SCORE SECOND VICTORY OVER AMERICANS

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The New York Rangers scored their second victory of the National Hockey league season over their local rivals, the Americans, tonight. The score was 2 to 1.

The Rangers, scoring in the first period, had a slight edge in the hard game up to the middle of the final frame, when the Americans gained a tie, only to fall behind a few minutes later.

Although there were several rough spots, only seven minor penalties and a major to Ching Johnson were inflicted.

Bill Cook scored the first Ranger goal, after recovering a pass from Boucher. George Patterson evened the score in a pass from Bill Burch in 12:44 of the third period. The winning shot was a long one from Art Somers' stick.

TROJANS THINK THEY'RE READY FOR TULANE

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Southern California football fans today basked in the warmth of national praise that beamed upon players of University of Southern California, who yesterday went marching through Georgia, 40 to 0.

Dazed by brilliant California play which gave them hardly a look in at any time in the rout at Olympic stadium, the Georgia Bulldogs are through for the season. The Trojans have one more game, the meeting with Tulane at the Rose bowl at Pasadena New Year's day.

Howard Jones says his Southern California warriors are in condition for that engagement.

They rested on their laurels today. Tomorrow and Tuesday there will be brief workouts to keep the powerful machinery lubricated, and then there will be a week's complete rest.

Nevers Leads Cards to Victory at St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Ernie Nevers and his Chicago Cardinals romped to a 26 to 6 football triumph over the Battery A Gunners here today. The anticipation of seeing Nevers play drew 13,000 persons to the Public Schools stadium and they were not disappointed.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Those brilliant Boston Bruins, who had been trying in vain for two years to win a hockey game on Chicago Stadium ice, last night got around to accomplishing their foul purpose in their 1931 bow on the jinx rink. The score was Boston, 3; Chicago, 0.

Our protean Hawks fought desperately to prolong the victory string which had extended to six trimmings accorded the Bruins—one at the Coliseum and five straight at the Stadium—but the best they had was not good enough to stand off the skilled and determined rallies which the visitors got under way with tabulating results after the half way point in the second period.

Hawks Drop to Fifth.

The first tally was distinctly a let down from the fine battling that had characterized the first 25 minutes of the engagement.

In 11:20 of the second period, Dit Clapper caught Taffy Abel and Cyclone Wentworth, Hawk defense men, gaping around the hall and skated leisurely past them for the run that would have been enough to put the bacon in the Boston pantry. The other two scores were made through more alert resistance. No. 2 was made on an artistic passing demonstration by Welland and Clapper in 5:13 of the final period and in 14:25 of the same die-hard period, Oliver rammed in No. 3 on a pass from Barry.

Last night's unfortunate result caused the Bruins and Hawks to change niches in the American division of the National Hockey league, the former going into second place. It also dropped the Hawks to fifth in the standing of the entire league. The Chicagoans are not far in arrears, however, and will have a chance to start climbing against the Detroit Falcons here Wednesday night.

Abel, Shore at It Again.

The very start of the first period revealed that the contest was to be no violation of precedent which has established Boston-Chicago games as among the hardest fought of each hockey season. The period was scoreless, but there were repeated threats and of the character that kept the bugs in an almost constant uproar.

Immediately on the opening face-off Gottselig got the puck, and, aided by Couture and Romnes, forthwith served notice to Goalie Thompson that he was in for a large evening.

After this opening foray the Bruins showed that they, too, were in an aggressive mood, and after Welland and Mosher engaged in a merry attack which had Goalie Chuck Gardiner bouncing all over the region of his cage.

Lowrey got things moving again when he pretty near splintered Goalie Thompson's mallet with a most vicious long shot. Upon his return to the contest from the penalty box the eminent Shore essayed one of his famed rushes down the ice, and there was thunderous cheering when Abel knocked him on his shoulder blades, a most undignified posture for the world's highest salaried hockey player.

Bruins Score.

There were two near-scoring rallies in the last two minutes of the period. Barry had the rubber right at set-up in front of the cage with no one near him. Gardiner took a chance and made a headlong dive through space and succeeded in lighting atop Barry's stick in time to save the imminent marker. The other breath-taker was a five foot shot by Gottselig on a pass from Abel. Thompson made the stop through sheer intuition.

The Hawks were much the more aggressive during the first half of the second period, but in 11:22 Wentworth and Abel were stricken with amnesia and allowed Clapper leisurely to shoot home the puck from a point 15 feet from the cage. Cyclone and Taffy apparently were watching Bud Cook, who was skating down the left

MAP EXTENSIVE CARD FOR ACE OF AUSTRALIA TURF

Phar Lap May Race on Chicago Tracks.

BY TRENCH LANE.

Phar Lap, the champion of the Australian turf and the winner of more than $275,000, will not limit his invasion of America to his engagement in the $100,000 Agua Caliente Handicap to be run on next March 19.

It became almost certain yesterday that he will seek other American turf prizes, when friends of D. J. Davis, the American owner of Phar Lap, made inquiry as to the closing dates for several of the richest stake events to be run in Chicago next season.

The races which it was reported Mr. Davis has in mind for Phar Lap here are the Arlington Cup and Arlington Handicap, the Hawthorne Gold Cup, and the Lincoln Handicap. All of them are worth upwards of $25,000 and with this part of a campaign mapped out it is evident the owner of Phar Lap hopes to see the 5 year old shatter Sun Beau's world's money winning record.

Needs Time to Get Ready.

Richard Weston, one of Australia's greatest racing men, and Percy Pilcher, the racing expert from down under, believe it will be mid-summer before Phar Lap will become acclimated and be able to show to his best advantage in America. John Schank, president of the Hawthorne Racing association, has learned from a friend who resides in Sydney, and who keeps up on affairs of the turf.

This might indicate that while Agua Caliente's $100,000 race will be Phar Lap's first objective on this side of the Pacific, the people who have arranged his ambitious schedule expect him to be at his best later on.

"In Australia, we believe Phar Lap can beat any horse in the world at two miles or more," the Australian racing man wrote Mr. Schank. "We all hope and believe Mr. Davis will give him every opportunity to demonstrate his speed and stamina against the best horses in the United States."

May Arrange Specials.

If too a special is arranged there will be few opportunities for Phar Lap to meet our best horses in a race at two miles or more. But if Phar Lap indicates in his early races here that he is back to his Australian championship form, you can picture the rush of race track owners in this country to arrange such a special.

Phar Lap is invading the United States at a time when this country has two very formidable distance runners in Twenty Grand and Mate. But except for this pair we haven't much to send against him unless Gallant Knight should come back to the races next year a sound horse. But this isn't likely.

Sun Beau, Gallant Fox, Reigh Count, Display, Crusader, Blue Larkspur and Mike Hall, famous distance runners in other years, are in retirement and it is doubtful if any of them could be brought back even for an international championship struggle.

Twenty Grand is generally rated as one of the greatest distance runners to come along in this country in many years. If he is as good at 4 years of age as he was during the season just ended America will have a worthy foe for Phar Lap or any other invading foreign champion—and at any boards, slapping his stick for a pass, a ruse that apparently deceived our defense boys completely.

Some minutes after the Bruin marker Shore was sent to the penalty box and in a few seconds was joined by Galbraith of the Bruins and Graham of the Hawks. The Hawks speeded up and Chapman drew the third penalty for the Bostonians within a minute, though his was deferred, of course, until Shore came out of the box. While the Bruins were shorthanded the Hawks staged a terrific attack, but Thompson was able to stand off a series of close shots, the failure of which was most exasperating, but in no way depressing.

Two More for Bruins.

The Hawks were considerably slowed down at the start of the third period and Oliver got through the defense in a solo flight before the session was two minutes old, only to be prevented from scoring by a stop which Gardiner made by grace of having lived a clean and upright life.

When the period entered its third minute, Clapper and Weiland started an orderly zig zag pacing maneuver down the ice. The technique reached its climax on a final pass by Clapper which Weiland picked up with perfect finesse and put into the net for marker No. 2. It was done in 3:15.

After the period was half over Gottselig made two brilliant sallies the last of which Thompson only stopped because he hit the tip of his skate. Darry took a puck out of a melee in the right corner of Blackhawk territory and passed to Oliver who was waiting for it right in front of the cage and slipped it into the net for Boston's third goal.

With four minutes to play the Blackhawks sent in five forwards for the remainder of the game but were unable to score.

COAST COACHES MEET TODAY; MAY BAN BROADCASTS

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 13.—(AP)—In what is expected to develop into one of the liveliest meetings in years, faculty athletic representatives, graduate managers and coaches of the Pacific Coast conference will meet here tomorrow.

It is understood several schools favor elimination of broadcasts, on grounds that radio has seriously affected attendances.

Hunters Now Practice on Shoot Ranges

BY BOB BECKER.

With a short duck season and the quail season in Illinois over, sportsmen who want to do some shooting and improve their scores can turn to trapshooting during the next few months.

There are a number of opportunities to enjoy this sport, even in the heart of Chicago. One of the most accessible groups of traps where shooters are welcomed is the Lincoln Park club, which has commodious quarters at the north end of the park, overlooking Lake Michigan. The targets are thrown over the lake, a system that is too sporty for some of the gunners on days when an east wind bounces the pigeons in all directions.

Trapshooting Not Easy.

Sportsmen who think ordinary trapshooting is a little tame compared to field shooting with not enough angles and variety to the shots should use the Lincoln park traps and have a boy throw 25 targets from the joker trap. This tantalizing machine tosses clay pigeons at every conceivable angle and you never know whether the pigeon is going straight up, skim the water like a flying bird or whizz away at a baffling angle.

They had one of these joker traps at Vandalia, O., during the annual national championship last August. As we recall it there was a standing offer of a $25 cash prize to any one who could break 50 straight. On several occasions we watched some of the expert shots toss lead at the targets whizzing out of the joker and they nearly stretched arms and necks out of joint trying to outguess and reach some of the clay pigeons.

Set Up Private Outfit.

Sportsmen who are not close to a regular organized trapshooting club such as the country clubs around Chicago and the Lincoln park organization maintain, will find it fun to set up their own outfit on a vacant lot in the country.

We have shot over one of these inexpensive pigeon slingers at Barrington, where we shoot in every manner except the regulation. That is, we sit on the ground in front of the traps and take outgoing overhead shots and then stand 20 yards away and pick off all right angle and towering shots, variations that make the game very sporty.

ta with Marquette next Monday at Milwaukee.

Minnesota: Found—two centers. The boys the Gophers have been looking for for years. Their names are Bethel and Krezowski. Virgil Licht, veteran guard, leads the scoring.

Chicago: Beat Bradley, but three points not enough to start the band playing on the Midway. We'll see how they go against Kalamazoo Teachers Saturday night at Hartlett gym.

Iowa: Off to a poor start, but maybe things will be different in that Nebraska game at Iowa City next Saturday.

Loyola university's team faces a busy week. Arkansas State plays at the Loyola gymnasium Tuesday, after which Coach Leonard Sachs will take his team to Decatur to face Millikin on Thursday and to Peoria to meet Bradley Friday.

Loyola has won all five previous games with Arkansas State. This year the visitors will have six letter men available, but Loyola's victory over Brigham Young gives the north siders the edge.

DePaul also will invade Little Nineteen conference territory this week, playing St. Viator at Kankakee tomorrow night.

CURE FINANCIAL ILLS FIRST, SAYS BADGER COUNCIL

Regard Coach Question as Secondary.

ready approved. How these reductions will be made remains of interest. But the second major question for the athletic council, the faculty and the board of regents, is far from settled. This involves retention of Coach Thistlethwaite. It also includes such propositions as abolishment of the office of director of publicity, the merger of the position of business manager of athletics with the office of business manager of the university, and the reduction in the number of coaches and instructors in the department of athletics and physical education.

No announcements have been made. However, conversations with members of alumni factions, with businesspeople, with politicians at the capitol, with Director Little, President Frank, and Coach Thistlethwaite lead to the following suppositions:

1. Director Little is prepared, or was ready at the meeting of the athletic council last week, to recommend that Thistlethwaite be removed as head football coach.

2. That the faculty wishes to know what the athletic council proposes before the report is submitted to the board of regents. Certain members of the faculty, Prof. Warren Weaver for instance, are ready to fight for Thistlethwaite's retention, not on a basis of football games won and lost, but because he is a professor on the faculty, which carries a life tenure of office unless incompetence or immorality is proved.

3. J. F. A. Pyre, chairman of the athletic council and Wisconsin's representative on the Big Ten faculty committee, probably favors Thistlethwaite's retention. Pyre is the president's right hand man on the council. Not only does this lead to the conclusion that President Frank is not averse to Thistlethwaite remaining at Wisconsin, but some evidence has been found that President Frank, in the [illegible] prevented Director Little from going ahead with recommendations to oust Thistlethwaite.

4. The alumni members of the athletic council probably are opposed to Thistlethwaite.

5. Many alumni, however, who are not represented, are bringing pressure where possible to keep Thistlethwaite.

Little Director for Seven Years.

George Little came to Wisconsin as athletic director seven years ago. He followed Dr. H. Jones, then graduate manager, and was head track coach and faculty standing of professor. It is said that Jones was involved at the time in a dispute with Jack Ryan, the football coach. When Little became director he also took over, for two years, the coaching duties. Ryan was released.

Before Little's appointment a faction of the alumni attempted to make Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, head basketball coach, the athletic director. These alumni, even at this date, would welcome Meanwell's appointment as director. One of the alumni even advocated the other day that Meanwell be made football coach.

Despite successes in other sports, notably baseball, basketball and track, Wisconsin has not won a Big Ten football title since 1912. However, Director Little and other authorities hasten to say that a championship is not necessary for a coach to retain his position. But Wisconsin does want football teams which will finish in the upper third of the standings.

Wins 10, Loses 14 in Conference.

Thistlethwaite came to Wisconsin five years ago after a like term at Northwestern. At Wisconsin he has won 10 Big Ten games, lost 14 and tied 1. He has divided games with Notre Dame and Pennsylvania and has won single contests from Colgate, Alabama, and Kansas.

Thistlethwaite left Northwestern in his own choice. This is cleared by the broadcast of many of his critics, but Thistlethwaite is emphatic on that point. When he came to Wisconsin six he received a salary of $10,000. That was his salary at Northwestern although Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern, offered an increase if he would remain. Since coming to Wisconsin Thistlethwaite has received an increase of $500.

20 Harrison Players Named for Miami Trip

The names of twenty players who will make up the Harrison Technical High school football team, which will leave Chicago a week from tomorrow for Miami, Fla., to meet Miami High school on Christmas day, were announced last night by Coach Bob Dougherty.

The regular members of the squad which brought Harrison its first Chicago Public High School league football championship, and which later won the Chicago championship by defeating Mount Carmel, Catholic league titleholder, all will make the trip, together with nine substitutes selected by Coach Dougherty and Andrew Carrigan, assistant coach.

The Starters at Miami.

The players who will face Miami are Andy Pilney, Andy Puplis, Frank Leonetti, Steve Remias, Edward Skarda, Abe Shper, Scotty McPherson, Hank Pojman, Jim Horvath, Frank Kopszak and Rudy Wujcik. The substitutes are Rabetz, Telma, Kanaik, Wuit, Holanik, Modell, Bernandoni, Hodul and Mosny.

A special train will carry the team to Miami and will make several stopovers during the trip, which is the longest ever made by a Chicago high school team. Two days after departing from the Illinois Central station, the squad will stop for several hours in Jacksonville and then proceed to Miami.

To Stop at St. Augustine.

On returning home, the squad will stop at St. Augustine, Fla. After a tour of the city a bus will take the team to Jacksonville, where it will entrain for Chicago.

Harrison, claimant of the mythical Illinois state football championship, has scored eleven consecutive victories, defeating suburban and city schools in practice and winning from Schurz for the City league title. It also defeated Mooseheart, Ill., one of the strongest teams in the state.

FEIGENBUTZ TEAM WINS.

The Feigenbutz Booster indoor baseball team defeated the Riggers, 25 to 7, yesterday at Simonds gym.

MARKET ACTION IN WHEAT PIT PUZZLES TRADE

Selling Develops on All Bulges.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat markets ran into selling on all bulges and rallied sharply from lows last week. The trend, however, was lower, and the action of the market puzzled the trade.

Indications of accumulation of futures on all breaks was strikingly apparent in the closing days. At the low May wheat was off 1¾c from the high point on Nov. 10, when the rise culminated. Traders incline to the belief that were the stock market better, grains, especially wheat, would follow.

There were times when wheat advanced and stocks followed. In the main, there was a lack of genuine confidence which is necessary to create a buying sentiment strong enough to enable the grain market to advance and hold its gains. The close prices were up around 1c over the week's low, with net losses compared with a week ago, Chicago being: 63⅛@63¾c, March 59¾@59⅝c, and July 65¾@65⅝c.

Influence Prices.

Trading operations between near and distant futures, with a fairly good export demand at liberal premiums, had more or less influence on prices. The foreign situation was regarded as more bullish from the supply and demand standpoint. An important factor was the nearness between prices of wheat futures in Chicago and Liverpool. Low exchange rates had an influence on all speculative markets, especially cash markets, and English sterling declined to the low-est level in years.

A good explanation of the situation during the leading markets is presented by the Uhlmann Grain company, which says: "To show how much Chicago wheat prices are out of line for export in Liverpool, December wheat closed at 51¾c, compared with 53¼c at Chicago. Their May wheat at 57¾c compared with ours at 54⅝c, or only 1c per bushel under. Winnipeg May wheat, which is selling in competing markets easily 3c higher than ours, is selling, exchange considered, at 52c, and as Argentine wheat is also selling considerably lower than ours, it is certainly quite plain that our competitors in the export business are getting the preference over us."

Lower in Liverpool.

December wheat in Liverpool closed with a net loss of 3c, and May lost 2c, as compared with a week ago. December in Winnipeg closed 1⅝c and May 1⅜c lower for the week.

Nat C. Murray says that, according to Broomhall, import requirements are estimated to be larger this season as compared with last year. It is Mr. Murray's view, however, that importers cannot very well obtain larger quotas or even as much as last year during the remainder of the season without coming to the United States, and that whether foreigners will bid for United States wheat to meet their needs will probably depend very largely on the 1932 crop prospects early next spring.

Damage to the Argentine wheat crop from unfavorable weather helped the market a little. Russian news was more bullish, telling of that country having sold more wheat than it had said that its exports would be held for the balance of the season. For this season, since Aug. 1, Russia has shipped 62,600,000 bu compared with 65,450,000 bu last year.

Favor Sales by Farm Board.

A movement is under way to have the farm board hold its wheat off the market for an indefinite period to help the general wheat situation. A number of Chicago traders, however, say that the best and only thing that

Cudahy Net Earnings Drop as Prices of Meat Decline

BY O. A. MATHER.

EDW. A. CUDAHY.

It was inevitable that the great decline in live stock prices in the last year and the accompanying drop in meat prices should result in heavy inventory losses and meager earnings in the packing industry. This is illustrated in the annual report of the Cudahy Packing company, the first of the "Big Four" packers to issue a statement.

However, depression has not affected American consumption of meats to any extent, for E. A. Cudahy, chairman, points out that tonnage sales were larger than in 1930, although dollar sales volume declined. Sales for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31 totaled $181,500,000, compared with $221,400,000 in 1930. Net earnings were $3,009,991, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $3.08 a share on the common stock. Dividends totaling $4 a share were paid, with the result that surplus declined $438,500 to $10,218,018. Net earnings for the previous fiscal year were $2,930,318, or $5.03 a share on the common stock.

Food Prices Off 18 Per Cent.

"One of the most noteworthy commercial events of 1931, and one of the most disastrous to industry, was the great decline in commodity prices," Mr. Cudahy says. "According to statistics furnished by the United States department of labor, wholesale prices of foods declined 18 per cent. The decline in pork and beef, our two principal products, was approximately twice as great.

"For example, bacon selling wholesale on Nov. 1, 1930, at 24 cents a pound sold on Oct. 31, 1931, at 14 cents. Fresh hams declined during the same period from 16 to 8 cents a pound. The decline in beef prices, while less marked, ran from 20 to 25 per cent, and in the prices of tallow, hides and other by-products the drop was even greater. As it is necessary for us to carry large stocks of meat in the process of curing, it is evident that in spite of sustained sales volume and economical operation the decline in inventory values resulted in heavy losses and fully accounts for our reduced earnings.

"There is this satisfaction in the situation, however, meat prices cannot decline much further. Many of our products are being sold at prices lower than at any time within the last thirty years, and when the upturn comes, as it must, whether it be next year or still later, the profits wiped out by inventory depreciation will in a great measure be recovered by inventory appreciation.

In Good Condition.

"In view of the prevailing unsatisfactory business conditions, I feel we should not be dissatisfied with the result of the year's operations. The company is in excellent financial condition. Cash on hand is more than sufficient to liquidate all current indebtedness, and bank loans are lower than in any time within the last thirty years."

Further, Mr. Cudahy points out that combined earnings for 1930 and 1931 were more than sufficient to cover dividends. He also announced that the company has purchased 27,940 shares of common stock in the open market at an average price of $43.52 a share. Although the current market price is around $35 a share, Mr. Cudahy says the book value of the stock is approximately 60 per cent above the average price paid by the company and that he is "satisfied the investment will prove profitable to the company." The report also states that late in the current fiscal year a flat reduction of 10 per cent was made in salaries and wages of all officers and employes.

AUDITOR'S REPORT ON GIANNINI EXPENSES ISSUED IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—An auditor's report, showing in detail the disposition of the $5,200,000 alleged to have been placed to the credit or expended upon the order of A. P. Giannini or members of his family between 1927 and 1930, was made public today by the present management of the Transamerica corporation, of which the Giannini interests are seeking the control.

The statement was issued by Elisha Walker, chairman, and James A. Bacigalupi, president of Transamerica, and the auditor's report was signed by Ernst & Ernst. It was issued in reply to a statement in San Francisco by Giannini's son, L. M. Giannini, to the effect that the "greater part of the funds referred to were paid out on Mr. Giannini's orders for traveling expenses for himself and others on corporation business." He asserted further that Mr. Giannini paid the entire expenses of the corporation in 1929."

The Walker-Bacigalupi statement denies this last claim and reasserts that Giannini has demanded payment of the balance of the funds allocated to him, approximately $790,000. Giannini's statement asserted that no such demand was made "and therefore could not have been refused."

The Ernst & Ernst report shows that the Bancitaly corporation, a subsidiary of Transamerica, paid $1,500,000 to the University of California for the construction of Giannini hall.

The audit itemized expenditures of $2,920,603, said to have been paid on Giannini's order for the following purposes: $540,330 for cash withdrawals, personal, household, and auto expenses of A. P. Giannini and family; $697,168 for stock purchases; $753,353 for payments to A. P. Giannini company; $513,163 for federal income taxes for A. P. Giannini and family; $166,604 for donations; $54,540 for payments to individuals; $46,526 for traveling, hotel, railroad fares, and telephone and telegraph; $25,850 for club memberships, dues, and taxes on club dues; $23,069 for insurance.

LORD INVERFORTH MADE PRESIDENT OF LIPTON FIRM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 13.—Lord Inverforth, British banker and shipping leader, has been named president of Thomas J. Lipton, Inc., succeeding the late Sir Thomas Lipton. Announcement of his appointment was made today at the general offices of the corporation at Hoboken, N. J. W. U. Taylor, vice president, and W. W. Shannen, general manager, who have been in charge of the American offices of the corporation, will continue in that capacity, it was announced.

Like the late Sir Thomas, Lord Inverforth is a "self-made man." He was born in Scotland, and, as plain Andrew Weir, left school at the age of fifteen to enter a bank. Five years later he bought a sailing ship, the forerunner of a vast fleet that was to make him one of the leading shippers of the world.

Sheldon Clark of Chicago is a director of the Lipton company.

OIL EMPLOYES VOTE IN FAVOR OF STOCK PLAN

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A declining market value for the stock of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is no reason for abandoning the company's employé stock ownership plan, according to a verdict returned by 24,000 Standard employés in a special ballot requested by the company's board of directors.

The employés voted in favor of continuing the plan by an 8 to 1 majority.

At the close this year of the third annual stock acquisition plan "The Lamp," published by Standard of New Jersey, states there will be a total of $50,367,000 of Standard stock held by employés. They compose nearly one-fifth of the company's 124,000 stockholders.

U. S. Expected to Be First to Emerge from World Slump

Likelihood that the United States may be the first nation to recover from the world depression is seen by the national foreign trade council in the fact that domestic price levels for the first time in almost two years have acquired a comparative stability.

In its annual report on international trade, to come out today, the council points out that wholesale prices in the United States have remained for five months within about 2 per cent of the index for last June, in contrast with the drop of 11 per cent in the first six months of this year, and in further contrast with the accumulated reduction in average wholesale prices in the United States of more than 25 per cent for the last two years.

Stress Prices.

Emphasis is given to the price situation because it is now apparent that in 1926, three years before the volume of world trade reached its highest point, the signs of future trouble clearly appeared in the weakening of the international structure of prices. In that year the index value of the world export dollar, based on 1913 prices, dropped suddenly to 1.44 from 1.56, the figure for 1925. The council announced this fact at the time, but in the relative stabilization of prices in the two succeeding years, when the export index remained at 1.40, its importance was overlooked.

In 1929, however, when world export trade attained its record of $25,485,000,000 in 1913 dollars, 26 per cent in excess of the volume of export trade in 1913, and a gain of 60 per cent for the United States alone, the price level suffered a further drop to 1.32, and the dead weight of prices became an unmistakable indication of trade dislocation. In 1930 the price index dropped sharply to 1.16, and the figures so far available this year show that it is now at best only 1 or 2 per cent above the ruling prices of 1913.

The following comparisons between typical foreign trade commodities indicate how far we have returned to 1913 values, after experiencing prices twice and in some cases more than three times as high in the recent boom years.

World export trade for 1931, based on figures up to Nov. 1 for nations carrying on about three-quarters of the world's commerce, will be a little less than $20,000,000,000, as adjusted to a common standard of value based on export prices in 1913. This is about 16 per cent less trade in real value than was carried on last year. The recession in export trade between 1929 and 1930 amounted to about 9 per cent. A favorable factor is, however, that the severest recession in most cases took place early in the year. Trade volume steadily increased in the later months of the year under the apparent influence of lower prices, with the result that the comparative loss for the last six months has been steadily slackening.

The relative position of the United States has been impaired during both of these years of recession. During 1930 our exports fell off in real value by about 13 per cent, while the recession for the world as a whole was about 9 per cent. During the first six months of 1931 our exports fell off 22 per cent, compared with the average recession of twenty-seven nations carrying on 75 per cent of the world's trade of 16 per cent.

Germany Leads U. S.

The outstanding feature of 1931 has been the continued relative recovery of Germany. This year for the first time German exports exceed those of Great Britain. The margin for the first six months is by about 1½ per cent, and so far as a comparison of later months is possible this margin is slightly increasing, establishing Germany as second only to ourselves as the world's largest exporter.

Furthermore, since 1930 Germany has led the United States by a little less than 10 per cent as an exporter of manufactured goods, though she still appears to be slightly behind Great Britain in that vital phase of export trade. It is interesting to note that German exports, which were only 40 per cent of our own in 1926, equaled 54 per cent of our exports in the first half of 1931. The cause for a large part of Germany's recent growth may be looked for in her greatly increased sales to Russia. Her exports to Russia for the first six months of 1931 were more than 50 per cent greater than those of the first half of 1930.

SITUATION SEEN BRIGHTER THAN MOST BELIEVE

Some Cheerful News as Well as Bad.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 13.—With the end of this unpleasant financial year barely a fortnight distant, it may be worth while to glance over the financial picture and see exactly where we are.

All of us know what answer would be given if that question were put to the next person we should meet. He would reply that things are at their worst, that there is no sign of a break in the depression, that all the news is bad and that the markets foreshadow nothing better. This familiar verdict is, however, stated in general times; let us get down to details.

One barometer of the state of business is altogether discouraging. Movement of merchandise from producer to consumer, as measured by loadings of railway freight, compares as badly even with 1930 as in any previous month. Weekly car loadings continue 18 to 20 per cent below the corresponding period last year, and a year ago they were running 17 per cent below 1929. At least one traditional guidepost to "the turn" is not in sight.

Some Dispute Over Staples.

In the somewhat more cheerful atmosphere of eight or nine months ago, we used to be told that the course of commodity prices and of steel production would give the preliminary signal. In the matter of staple prices, there is some dispute. Private compilations have reported a sharp rise of the average in October, with the rise maintained last month.

The labor bureau would not admit the October rise, but even the bureau's

For the purpose of fixing the exchange basis the foregoing securities are to be taken at the arbitrary figure of 100.

The undersigned reserves the right to accept or reject any tenders in whole or in part.

We are advised by Counsel that if the market value of the securities received is less than the price paid for the Eastern Utilities Investing Corporation 5% Gold Debentures, the difference represents a capital loss and may be treated as a deduction from income under the present Federal Income Tax Law.

Tenders will be accepted until the close of business December 24, 1931. They will be tabulated immediately thereafter and notice given to all holders whose tenders are rejected and accepted, stating to the latter the time and other details for delivery of the Eastern Utilities Investing Corporation Debentures.

A suggestion from an old, estate-minded institution

This is an opportune time to Review Your Will

TO all owners of estates The Northern Trust Company today suggests: it is an opportune time to review your Will.

Readjustments in the securities market and the resulting alterations in values may have made necessary certain changes in bequests. An important reason, in many instances, for a restudy of the Will.

In other cases the years that have passed since the writing of the Will may have brought a need for new or altered bequests. Births, business changes, deaths, marriages, new capacities shown by beneficiaries—each suggests a further possible need for revision.

Write for informative booklet

We have a booklet containing practical suggestions for making Wills based on our more than 42 years' experience as executor-trustee for many hundreds of estates. These suggestions may be of value as you review your present Will. An officer of our Trust Department will be happy to explain them to you.

Once you have decided upon the changes you wish to make, the redrawing of your Will is a task to be entrusted to your attorney. He will find The Northern Trust Company ready at all times to cooperate.

At its home on the northwest corner of LaSalle and Monroe Streets an officer of The Northern Trust Company is always at your service.

should be done is to dispose of the government's holdings as fast as possible and get them out of the market. It would be better to take the loss now, they say, than to pay carrying charges and other costs for a year or two more. The point is also made that constant fear of farm board wheat coming out on the market would be removed, making a healthier situation all around. Referring to reports of the farm board agents selling 14,000,000 bu. of wheat to Germany and also large sales to other countries, an official said, "We do not care to confirm or deny the rumor."

R. O. Cromwell, the Lamson Bros. & Co. statistician, estimates the winter wheat acreage at 26,162,000 bu. against 42,433,000 bu. last year, a decrease of 14 per cent. Condition is 80.8 against 86.2 last year, suggesting a crop of 469,000,000 bu. against 716,000,000 bu. the previous season, and an average of 583,000,000 bu. Prices the week follow:

CITY PREPARES TO ENTERTAIN 6,000 BUYERS

Chicago is preparing to entertain 6,000 apparel buyers in three style presentations to be held during spring market open Feb. 1, 1932, under the sponsorship of the Chicago Association of Commerce. In addition to spring styles in dresses, there will be exhibits of coats, millinery, bathing suits, house dresses and other lines of apparel.

The new fashions will be displayed to the visiting retail merchants who will come to Chicago as guests of the Association of Commerce and local manufacturers and wholesale merchants. Chicago retailers will be given the privilege of attending also; but only bona fide merchants and buyers will be admitted as any of the presentations.

Similar exhibits, with an average attendance of 2,000, were staged during each of the two 1931 conventions of the Interstate Merchants council, as the body of out of town retail merchants who patronize the Chicago market is called. The innovation started last February proved so successful that the event has been made a regular feature of Chicago's semi-annual entertainment of out of town buyers.

A new feature of the 1932 program will be a night school for merchants. A practical course in merchandising arranged to answer some of their more perplexing problems will be included. Nationally known speakers will address each of the luncheon meetings during the trade week.

ARGENTINE GRAIN PRICES CONTINUE ON DOWN GRADE

(Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.)

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 12.—Continued international depression and pessimism are blamed for last week's further decline in Argentine grain prices, which have now nearly reached September's record breaking low levels.

A lower tendency in wheat in sympathy with declines in the English, American and Canadian markets was accentuated by heavier local offerings, despite rapidly diminishing stocks. Corn prices continued to decrease and are far below the cost of production. Heavy rains, promising an abundant crop, further depressed prices in the consuming centers. The lower flaxseed prices are traceable directly to the unpromising industrial outlook, as crop conditions are bullish.

The Bolsa also was dull last week. National Mortgage Bank cedulas dropped on the average one peso. Government securities were off fifty centavos. There was little trading in the bonds and shares of private corporations. Dollar exchange remained unchanged at 171 gold pesos for $100, making the paper peso worth 58.78 cents, compared with a par of 40.46 cents.

MEN

WE WILL START A LIMITED FEW ADDITIONAL MEN IN OUR CHICAGO ORGANIZATION IMMEDIATELY. IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO JOIN THIS COMPANY AT THIS COST OPPORTUNITY, TIME COME TO MONDAY FOR AN INTERVIEW.

If you are adaptable to this work, if you have the disposition to study and strive to acquire skill in what you do and if you have good reputation and the will to succeed, we will employ you and back you in permanent work that is regularly paying qualified men in all parts of this country and throughout the world, $5,000, $6,000, $7,000, $8,000 to $10,000 per year and higher. These income are cash—and just as stable and permanent as any business. Your earnings possibly could be. Such earnings represent success, and they are available to men who can think and work successfully.

This company is now in the greatest success of its history. This has been its most progressive year, and its men throughout the nation have grown stronger, happier and more and more prosperous. November was a record breaking month in our Chicago organization and December business already indicates another record.

The reasons are that our men are taught in a practical manner how to do the work, they are honorably treated, our product is so revolutionary in its service superiority that it is changing the entire industry, and the present and potential market is absolutely unlimited.

Those who are inexperienced in specialty selling have the benefit of necessary time to learn and to acquire skill. During this time they must be willing and satisfied to grow with the organization and to earn correspondingly. Those who can qualify for $125 to $200 per month if necessary. We cannot tell you how long it will take you to earn $5,000 or $6,000 per year—six months—but we do know that if you have the qualifications to satisfy our requirements and will devote the time to prove—with reasonable study, practice, good character and diligence. With these things you can be personally assured of making a success which will afford you the higher incomes.

While, as above stated, we do not encourage men to expect to start in at more than normal earnings, nevertheless many do get started splendidly. One man, for instance, who joined us the second week in November earned over $400 the end of the month, and his sales so far in December indicate he will earn $700 to $1,000 this month. We have found that many men possess the qualifications for outstanding success in this kind of work without ever realizing it until they get started.

And what is of greatest importance is that when a man once learns our work he can absolutely guarantee continuous and permanent business for himself and family in return for consistently successful application. If you feel you can qualify, write us today stating briefly how to learn how to do this work and to make the kind of money successful men in this country make—and if your worthy the terms of this money for Christmas—call for personal interview Monday 9 to 12, 1 to 4 p. m. Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The nationally known Household Loan Plan offers cash loans of $50 to $300 to husbands and wives of steady employment.

Household's rate on all loans above $100 is figured on the unpaid balance each month. Only 1½% per month on that part of loan over $100 and 3% per month on that part under $100. Interest is charged for only the exact number of days you have the money—if less than a month, charge is for a month.

FOR EXAMPLE:
The average monthly cost of a $300 loan repaid in 20 equal monthly payments is $9.03. This is the lowest cost in Chicago.

Commonwealth Customers Pay LESS for LOANS

$2.93 is the average Monthly Cost of a $225 loan under COMMONWEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago.

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lowest rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and privately.

THERE ARE NO fees or deductions. You may take 25 months or pay it back sooner. Interest, at the Reduced Rate, is charged only while you keep the money.
